QUINCY MAYOR OUSTED

Today

Suddenly Polite
Why? He Is Prepared
No More Fun in War
A Wonderful Drive

By Arthur Brisbane

San Francisco, Cal., March 20—How politely Germany is treated suddenly by the "victorious Allies." Recently Germany was kicked around, all her money taken by the Allies; French and English soldiers camping on her territory at her expense, the Versailles Treaty sternly enforced.

What a change now! England sends a clever statesman to talk it over with Hitler the moment he throws the Versailles Treaty onto the rubbish heap.

France is almost polite in messages to Germany. No more threats, no more "You do as we say."

You know what causes this. Hitler lets it be known that he has been preparing for a war in case anybody wants one, that Germany has a well-drilled army of half a million men and an enormous fleet of commercial airplanes that could drop explosive bombs and poison gas most conveniently.

In other words Germany IS PREPARED, willing, ready and able to fight if anybody insists on it.

So nobody insists.

There may be a lesson there for this country, that, if attacked, could only throw a few lumps of gold at the enemy and plead "Please be nice."

Men that arrange betting odds for Lloyds insurance take war prospects rather seriously.

A few weeks ago they bet 25 to 1 against "any war involving England within 12 months." Now they will bet only 10 to 1, and the House of Commons talks of "England's coast defense from air attack."

Nevertheless it is not unreasonable to hope that in spite of all war preparation, war for the present will be avoided. By showing his willingness to fight, Hitler "saves the face" of the German nation, which refuses longer to be used as an international punching bag. That gesture may content him.

The British, desiring peace and business, may be content to help in the "face-saving" process, and France content to increase her fighting air fleet and strengthen the fence of hostile countries that she is building around Germany.

The combined air fleets of Italy, France, England and Russia could destroy every important city in Germany, and kill by poison gas, or otherwise, millions of the German people at the start of the war. This fact should induce Hitler to keep out of actual war if possible.

In old days when nobles and kings went to war, protected by armor, followed by miserable peasants going to death unprotected, war was pleasing.

But when powder and bullets came, able to make holes in the best armor, kings and dukes lost interest in fighting "in person."

What powder and bullets did to the safety of men in armor, airplanes will do to the safety of entire nations, their commerce and their rulers.

War loses its charm when "big men" know that whatever else happens, they, probably, may be killed and their families wiped out.

In air war the first targets chosen would be Buckingham Palace and the House of Commons in London; the Capitol and the White House in Washington; the Wall street district and the prosperous upper Fifth avenue rows of houses in New York city.

War ceases to be a joke when the "big man" suddenly realizes "war means ME."

The "upper cornice" drive that leads from Nice along the mountain side far above sea level, back of Monte Carlo, and down to Mentone, is one of the world's beautiful drives, the blue Mediterranean on your right, the snow-covered Alps on your left. The world has many drives and views, lakes, seas, oceans and mountains, from the small Greek hills to the Himalayas, from the tiny Thames to the mighty Mississippi.

There is nothing more marvelously beautiful and impressive in all the earth than the drive that leads through San Francisco's Presidio, the government military reservation, and the beautiful roads on beyond, winding high above the Pacific along the southern side of San Francisco's "Golden Gate."

Superlatives are dangerous, but the road from the high hills, down along the edge of the Pacific and back to the beautiful parks that San Francisco has built from what were once oceans and hills, may safely be called the MOST BEAUTIFUL drive on earth.

The coast of California, and this most magnificent view, looking out from San Francisco's "Golden Gate," surpass every-

Birthday of a Dancer! Her 'Trapeze Act' Sad Reminder!

Girl Dancer's $100,000 Suit

Says Fall in Theater Ended Movie Chances

One hundred thousand dollars is the price set by Wilma Horner for an injury which she says, blasted her dreams of movie fame.

Wilma used to dance.

Today she "celebrated" her 21st birthday in Audubon Hospital, one leg from hip to toe in a cast.

Her attorney, Nathan Fink, observed the occasion by filing the declaration in a suit for $100,000 against a theater.

According to Fink, who assisted another stage girl to a $75,000 record verdict for an accident in a Boston theater, Miss Horner suffered a twisted spine and broken hip January 23, blighting her career. The theater concern, he alleges, negligently maintained a certain stairway on which the girl fell.

The only reminder of her stage days in her room in the hospital is a trapeze above her bed, which she grasps to shift her position.

HULTMAN HEARING DELAYED 2 WEEKS

Moral turpitude is involved in the charges against Eugene C. Hultman and he is an unfit person to hold any public office, Governor Curley and his council were told today.

The accusation was made by John P. Feeney, special counsel for the governor in proceedings seeking removal of the former police commissioner from his present post as chairman of the Metropolitan District Commission.

With Hultman before the council and a huge throng jamming State House corridors, public hearing on the secret charges was deferred for two weeks in order that the former commissioner may be provided with specifications of the accusation and prepare his defense.

Details of some of the charges against Hultman were made known to the Boston Evening American even as hearing on them was postponed until noon of April 5.

All involve what the governor has referred to as "amazing conditions" in the Boston police department during Hultman's four-year term as commissioner.

Feeney told the governor and council before the delay was agreed upon:

"I gave Clarence A. Barnes, counsel for Mr. Hultman, written

ROSS GUILTY IN VOTING CHARGE

New Election Need

JUDGES' VERDICT SUSTAINS EXPENDITURES CLAIM

Mayor Charles A. Ross was ousted from office today by three superior court judges.

He had been charged by a group of Quincy citizens with violating the corrupt practices law governing campaign expenditures.

A new mayoral election in Quincy will be necessary, preceded by the usual primary. No date has yet been set.

City Council President Leo Mullin, a shipyards worker, will be acting mayor until the election.

This is the first time in history that a Massachusetts mayor has been ousted by the court.

The court's decision created a stir at Quincy City Hall and throughout the city.

Judges Fosdick, MacLeod and Keating in concluding their findings said:

"Election of the respondent Charles A. Ross is hereby declared void, and the respondent Charles A. Ross is hereby ousted and excluded from said office, and the said office is hereby declared vacant."

Testimony during the ouster hearings were featured in part by statements of Ross' son, Charles N. Ross, who told of expenditures made for campaign purposes without his father's knowledge.

A highlight of the proceedings was the suicide of Sturgis Hunt, who had been campaign treasurer for Ross in a previous election.

Hunt testified against Ross, then defaulted on a subpoena to appear as a defense witness. He was found dead in the Hotel Manger.

Son May Run

Ross, who is a Boston business man, was reported out of town. His son heard the news in the mayor's office.

The son said:

"Now, we'll have to get busy and get a man for the primaries."

Ross' son may run. There are 27 other potential candidates, including County Commissioner Russell T. Bates, son of a former mayor, and ex-Mayors McGrath and Whiton.

With tears in her eyes, Miss Margaret Simpson, one of the mayor's secretaries, commented on the news:

"Oh, that's too bad."

Secretary Percy Lane was also visibly affected.

Ross was elected mayor in 1932, defeating Thomas J. McGrath, and was re-elected in 1934 for the two-year term.

GOODWIN WARS On Hit-Run Drivers

In a drive against hit-and-run drivers Registrar Frank A. Goodwin today asked the co-operation of police officials.

Letters have been sent to every police chief in the state, asking them to compel automobile owners to fix their headlights, wash number plates, reflectors and rear lights.

Goodwin specifically asked police not to prosecute for faulty equipment. He added:

"I'll attend to that myself."

BUS Riders' PERIL

FIRED ON IN HARLEM RIOT

A New York-Boston bus, bullet marked from a harrowing trip through the race rioting in Harlem, arrived here today with 20 men and women passengers, one of whom was injured.

The bus, owned by the Black Hawk Lines, whose terminal is in Scollay square, showed 11 holes and dents in the sides, the result of running through a crossfire of gunshot on Seventh avenue, New York City.

One window had been smashed by a brick.

The passengers had clung to the floor to escape bullets and rocks, while the driver, Jack Dawber, 30, of Saratoga street, East Boston, speeded out of the Harlem danger zone.

Cuts on Scalp

Joseph Rinaldo, 26, a wrestler, living in New York City, was cut about the scalp and face by broken glass and was treated when the bus arrived here by Dr. Joseph W. Devine, Boston police surgeon.

Men and women passengers talked excitedly of their experience, still upset by it after the ten-hour journey.

Among them were Miss Helen Chukryk, 24, and Miss Anna Chukryk, 26, of New York; David Post, New York; Ralph Devito, New York; C. W. Faulkner, 55 Lincoln street, Malden; Morton Peterson, New York; Earle Dixie, New York; Philip Cohen, Harkins street, Salem; Mrs. Anna Corkin, New York; Miss Helen Travis, New York; Samuel Fisher, American House, Boston; Samuel Levensen, 138 Homestead street, Roxbury; Edward P. Ravener, New York; Mrs. Theodore Harwood, 28 Temple street, Boston, and Miss Ethel Lapham, New York.

Driver's Story

Dawber was a hero to the passengers. He said the rioting had been going on two hours before he started from New York, but he did not know of it until in the midst of it. He said:

"I saw men, women and policemen rushing all around and suddenly heard revolver shots and some that sounded to me like machine-gun fire.

"The bullets began to hit the bus and somebody shouted, 'Drop to the floor.' Hardly were the words said when a brick came through the left rear window. It narrowly missed one woman.

"A big squad of police came rushing by in autos with service guns drawn. I followed in their wake, dodging pedestrians and going at the highest speed I dared.

"I had visions, if I stopped, of seeing the bus tipped over and the occupants shot down like rats in a trap. Nobody could have told what might have happened. I thought hundreds were being killed."

Back From Harlem 'War Front'

Peaceful Boston looks good today to these bus passengers, newly arrived from New York, where they heard rifle and pistol bullets whizz past their ears as their vehicle was caught in the outskirts of the Harlem area where negro mobs battled with police in one of the worst race riots in the city's history. Flying lead riddled the bus as passengers ducked behind seats and cowered on the floor. One of the Boston-bound travelers was injured. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

HARLEM RED RIOT PLOT IS PROBED

By International News Service

New York, March 20 — Mayor LaGuardia today ordered a probe into the Communistic plot which incited the race riot in Harlem, in which one man was killed, many injured and more than 100 arrested.

District Attorney Dodge, acting on the mayor's request, immediately began a grand jury investigation.

The district attorney charged outright that the rioting was started by Communists.

Dodge said that those arrested would be taken before the grand jury to tell what they know of the Communists' plot. Ten prisoners already have been questioned, District Attorney Dodge said:

"We are going to show these Communists who defy our laws, incite riots and inspire revolution that they can't get away with it."

Leaped 6 Floors

As hundreds of policemen spread over Harlem to bring a semblance of order, James Thompson, 19-year-old Negro, died in Harlem hospital from bullet wounds. He was shot by a detective while looting one of the many stores partly demolished during the night by hoodlum mobs.

Two other Negroes were in a critical condition. One of these, Charles Alston, suffered possibly fatal injuries when he jumped from the roof of a six-story tenement. He was surrounded by policemen after snipe-shooting from the roof.

The district attorney said police information indicated the Communists had been circularizing Harlem for some time.

The police said a demonstration had been planned by the Communists for last night and that false reports that a boy had been beaten to death when caught stealing a 10-cent knife happened to be circulated at the right moment.

The Young Liberators, a Communist organization, took advantage of these reports to inflame thousands of Negroes into a frenzied quest for vengeance, police said.

Crowds of Negroes stood outside the Harlem magistrate's courts and hissed today as patrol wagons rolled up with prisoners to be arraigned.

Forty-eight persons were in hospitals suffering from injuries as the result of the race riot which raged through the night. Of these injured, 10 were in a critical condition from bullet wounds.

PWA Probe In Medford

U. S. Told Politicians Interfere With Job

Department of Justice agents today began investigation of alleged interference by Medford city officials and politicians with a contractor doing a big PWA job.

Medford will get no more federal funds for PWA projects if the accusations were confirmed, it was said.

The complaints allege that the progress of the job has been obstructed by demands on the contractor that he put certain men to work, each interfering politician demanding jobs for his own followers.

They said the chances were 1000-to-one against him. But Peter, the Schipperke pup, has a fighting heart all oblivious to odds. So he's going to be running about again, good as new, in a week or two, after surviving a bonegrafting operation in Angell Memorial Hospital. MAN Slowly SHRINKS

RARE AILMENT IN WORCESTER

Worcester, March 20—While the nation is sympathizing with West Coast man shrinking to death from Paget's disease, it was learned today that a man in this city is a victim of the same rare ailment and has lost four inches in height in the last year.

The victim is James H. Fontaine. He lives in Main street, and has been suffering from the disease for eight years.

It has only been in the last 12 months, he said, that he actually started to "shrink."

He was five feet, seven inches tall a year ago and is only five feet, three today.

A former garageman and reputedly wealthy before the stock crash of 1929, he said he has spent more than $25,000 seeking a cure.

At present, he said, he is being treated by Dr. Fuller Albright, bonespecialist at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Because of the condition of his bones, he has suffered numerous breaks and fractures. His left arm, he said, has been broken seven times in the last 18 months.

"But," he said, "I think I'm getting better. I don't believe the disease could kill a person."

100-FOOT RIDE In $1 Car Costs $100

Lynn was found not guilty of driving without a license, guilty of driving without registration, which was placed on file. He was given until June 19 to pay a fine of $100 for driving without insurance.

thing else in combined beauty and grandeur.

Looking at the Pacific you see a real ocean, curving around the earth toward the west thousands of miles. Folded over, on the map, it covers the United States, the Atlantic ocean and reaches over toward Constantinople.

The Mediterranean is beautiful, the Alps are glorious, but you could pour the Mediterranean into this ocean without raising its level by half an inch, and all of the Switzerland's beauty might be put down somewhere among these West Coast mountains and not attract especial attention.

George E. Pancoast, whose business is making better presses print more newspapers, has recovered his sight after a period of complete blindness, thanks to Dr. Wilmer of Johns Hopkins and Washington, and says:

"Everybody ought to be blind for a year and then recover his sight to know how beautiful the world really is."

Luigi Cornaro told his archbishop, "I had to wait until I was ninety to know that the world is beautiful."

Not waiting for that experience, come out here this summer—the summer season is best on this coast—see the fair at San Diego, drive over more than thirteen hundred miles of perfect roads north to Seattle, and you will know that the world is "really beautiful" without having experienced the sorrows of blindness or great age.

Unless you have seen northern California, and San Francisco, you do not know California, or its original spirit.

DARROW SEES NRA 'MAKING SLAVES'

By Associated Press

Washington, March 20—Clarence Darrow told Senate investigators today that NRA was "taking business away from the little fellow and giving it to the big ones."

His shaky voice rose for the first time when he warned:

"There will be nothing but masters and slaves before we get much further along."

Darrow, veteran criminal lawyer, said he decided last summer that NRA "made it harder for those that didn't have anything."

This was the opening of the aged attorney's story, and a packed hearing room listened closely.

He began by telling of his appointment by President Roosevelt to the review board after criticism of NRA by Senator Nye (R., N. D.), Borah (R., Idaho) and others.

As committee members leaned forward to hear, Darrow talked in a low voice and slowly, with a little hesitancy.

Long before the hearing was scheduled to start, the committee chamber was filled and overflowing with spectators, most of whom were women.

Darrow was accompanied by Lowell Mason, secretary of the review board. Seated around him were NRA officials, while Donald R. Richberg, director of the National Emergency Council, went to the anteroom to escort him to his seat.

Cites His Report

Holding his spectacle case in one hand, Darrow told how he organized the review board completely separate from the NRA setup to avoid criticism.

Talking in a conversational voice the lawyer said three weeks after his first report was delivered to the President, it came out in the papers one day "preceded by the report of Richberg and followed by Johnson's, or vice versa, at least they got in all the papers."

"I hadn't been here long enough to stand in with all the boys," Darrow added.

After that, he said, no more reports were delivered to the President.

"We didn't think the law required they be submitted to him so he could put them in the closet," Darrow added.

Following reports, Darrow testified, were put out in a "surreptitious way" so that they got to the newspapers.

A late witness, Sidney Hillman, NRA board member, warned the committee that if the recovery act is not renewed:

"This country is going to face an unemployment situation even worse than in 1932-1933."

NEW LEG, Doomed Dog CAN RUN AGAIN

Peter, who had only one chance in a thousand of ever walking again, is going to be able to walk and run like any dog.

Peter is an 18-months-old Schipperke with a brave heart that withstood three months of bone-grafting and other operations at Angell Memorial Hospital. He left there today, cured.

Dr. Erwin F. Schroeder of the hospital staff, is given the full credit by George S. Burgess of Hundred circle, Wellesley Hills, the dog's owner.

An automobile smashed Peter's leg. It became infected.

Dr. Schroeder decided not to amputate but to build a new bone.

"Peter was like a patient who was determined to get well," the doctor said. "He certainly co-operated with us."

DANCER BROKE Leg, Asks $20,000

Irving Axel Rood of Boston was dancing on the steamship Paris, March 14, 1934, and he tripped.

Rood broke his leg, and today filed suit in federal court against a French steamship line for $20,000 damages. He alleges that his injury was due to the negligence of the company in not keeping the floor in proper condition.

New Delay for Hultman

Hearing Postponed for Two Weeks

evidence which would command and demand Mr. Hultman's removal.

"From evidence I will draw from the lips of witnesses and from other facts, I will show that he is not a proper man to hold any public office.

"I want Mr. Hultman to have the fairest possible trial any man can have . . . This is different from other cases because moral turpitude is involved in this case and I want to go on record as saying this."

Feeney agreed to furnish Hultman with specifications of the charges by next Tuesday morning, which will permit a week for preparation of his defense.

These specifications had previously been denied the ex-commissioner.

His victory on this point, coupled with the delay, was the first conclusion in preliminary skirmish of what promises to be a bitter-long-drawn-out battle.

Witnesses under summons were on hand to testify when the postponement was ordered. Among these was Leo Schwartz, legal advisor to the police department, under Hultman.

Plea for postponement and specifications was made before the Governor and council by Barnes, who said he understood there were other charges against his client than those of which Feeney had informed him.

Previous to the council meeting Governor Curley had denied Hultman's request that former Governors Ely, Allen, Fuller and Cox be invited to attend as character witnesses for him.

Another in the throng was B. Preston Clark, vice-president of the Plymouth Cordage Company, who is interested in the Lincoln House Community Center in the South End.

Clark was an important figure in the Oliver B. Garrett case and his testimony regarding South End conditions at the time was important in the removal of Garrett from the police liquor squad and the ousting of the late commissioner, Herbert A. Wilson.

Clark said he was present as a "voluntary witness" for Hultman, prepared to testify to improvement of conditions in the South End.

Curley's Charges

Despite the secrecy with which the governor has guarded the charges contained in the case against former Commissioner Hultman, it was learned he was prepared to allege that while Hultman ruled the Boston police force:

Complaints against night clubs, speakeasies and lottery operations were ignored by superior officers.

That a contract for police department cars was awarded a second lowest bidder who was obliged to get the cars from the lowest bidder.

That several cases of mixed liquors were removed from department vaults and delivered in a department car to the home of an official.

That a department truck was used to deliver fertilizer to a department official's home and that while engaged in this delivery it suffered damage for which the city paid.

That gangster photographs and fingerprints disappeared from the bureau of records.

The governor will allege, it was indicated, that as commissioner of the department Hultman should have prevented these things.

URGES New Vote ON DOGS

WOULD CANCEL TRACK PERMITS

A new referendum on dog racing was recommended to the legislature today by Senator Harry B. Putnam of Westfield, chairman of the legal affairs committee.

Putnam's recommendation was a surprise highpoint at a racing hearing held by the joint legislative committee on state administration.

He urged that all dog track licenses be revoked and no more issued until the people can vote on the dogs again in 1936.

A community voting against dog racing should not have a track forced on it, regardless of the statewide result of the referendum, he said.

Senator Putnam will file a bill embodying his recommendations.

A capacity crowd thronged a State House hearing room to hear arguments for changing the present horse and dog racing laws or repealing them.

Attorney Conrad Crooker, representing William G. Gardner of Medford, clashed frequently with members of the committee.

Crooker had the crowd laughing as he uncovered one loophole after another, and a flock of jokers in the racing laws. He urged repeal of the dog racing statute.

Opposes Repeal

Senator Putnam opposed repeal.

"I don't think the legislature wants to upset a mandate of the people at the last election," he said. "But since that election, there has been considerable agitation in opposition to dog racing."

Crooker told the committee the racing law is "mischievous" and if not amended substantially, should be wiped off the books.

"I have been advised by men well-versed in racing that a person would be an idiot to invest money in a horse track under the present law," he said.

He said the present racing law fails to repeal the 1856 statute, giving mayors and aldermen the power to bar tracks.

The law should require the racing associations to employ 65 per cent Massachusetts residents, because "key men" are outsiders, said Crooker.

Repeal of dog racing was urged by Representative Gustave Everberg of Woburn, who made a 16-word speech to show Attorney Crooker he had talked too long.

Mayor Robert E. Greenwood of Fitchburg urged control of racing by a board of unpaid trustees appointed by the Governor with consent of the council. The public would invest $5,000,000 and the state would guarantee dividends of six per cent. The profits above that, if any, would go for old age pensions and public welfare.

Nobody spoke for or against several other measures to alter the present race law.

Barrymore to Sail Alone

BARRYMORE
AFTER ALL

Takes Tweed

AND DAUGHTER BUT LEAVES EX-WIFE

By Universal Service

New York, March 20—That strange cruise of John Barrymore, his former wife, Michael Strange, her present husband, Harrison Tweed,, and their daughter, Diana Barrymore, is all off.

The handsome Barrymore said so in no uncertain terms, after a flood of telegrams from California descended upon his bed at New York Hospital.

Indignantly he announced:

"Michael Strange, my former wife, is not going to accompany me. It was never planned that she should. Her husband, Harrison Tweed, is coming. And Diana Barrymore, daughter of Mrs. Tweed and me, will come too.

"It is all an unfortunate misunderstanding. The newspaper stories have caused a lot of trouble."

Won't Comment

Michael Strange, who was Barrymore's second wife, was said to be in Baltimore directing a new play, and made no comment. But her husband, Harrison Tweed, wealthy attorney, said:

"The newspapers got the correct information but did not want to print the truth. The truth is that I am going on a cruise with Mr. Barrymore and my wife is not. And that's all I have to say. I don't want to talk about it."

Dolores Won't Deny Trouble Between Them

Hollywood, March 20—The most surprised person in Hollywood over John Barrymore's asserted statement that he planned to take a cruise with his former wife, Michael Strange, her present husband, Harrison Tweed, and Diana, the 14-year-old daughter of Barrymore and Mrs. Tweed, was the present Mrs. Barrymore.

In the home which she and John built high on a hill overlooking picturesque Beverly Hills, Mrs. Barrymore, the lovely Dolores Costello, formerly John's leading lady in dozens of screen romances, lay desperately ill.

Suffering from several infected teeth and extreme nervousness, caused by reports, later denied, from New York that John was planning a cruise in company with his former wife, Dolores was in bed attended by a trained nurse.

"Tell Miss Parsons," she instructed her nurse, "that I knew nothing about this cruise until newspapers started telephoning me early this morning."

Denied Trouble

There have been rumors that all was not well with the Barrymores after John went to India and visited for weeks in London without Dolores. Both denied any trouble, each insisting that Mrs. Barrymore felt she could not leave her two small children, Dolores Ethel Mae and little John, Jr.

These rumors were never confirmed because he always vehemently denied them, saying motherhood came first with Dolores and she wouldn't leave the children.

Dolores, talking to this writer about six months ago, said:

"The divorce rumors are ridiculous. I have traveled with John since my babes were born and I dare not again subject them to the uncertainty of improper milk and to the hardships we are bound to encounter on such a trip as John contemplates."

But when John returned from abroad and made no effort to join Dolores and she did not go to him in New York reports were renewed that there was trouble.

Dolores was stunned today and miserable over the stories, but she wouldn't admit there was to be a divorce.

But this time she doesn't deny there is trouble, nor does she try to cover John's absence with excuses as she has done in the past.

SHIP MISSING

16 Days, Fear Grows

Fear for the missing Norwegian steamer Spec, with a crew of 25 aboard, was increased today when it was learned the vessel had not been in radio communication with Sable Island, as reported yesterday.

The coast guard cutter Ossipee reported intercepting part of a message but island officials denied hearing from the ship.

The Spec is 16 days overdue here. She left Glasgow February 14 with 3500 tons of coal.

MRS. JOHN BARRYMORE

JOHN BARRYMORE

John Barrymore may be going yachting in the Spanish Main in his cruising-houseboat, Infanta, shown above, but his ex-wife, Michael Strange, won't be one of the party. John's present spouse, the sultry screen beauty, Dolores Costello, probably had something to say about that. Barrymore is shown here in deep sea costume which means that he has shaved off that mustache.

Clouds on Mars Sighted

Harvard College Star Gazers Report Find

Observation of exceptionally brilliant white clouds on the planet Mars by Kuiper, Dutch astronomer, and by Dr. William H. Wright, of the Lick observatory in California are reported in a communication made public by the Harvard College observatory today.

The Lick observatory announcement said:

"Exceptionally brilliant white clouds have been observed here on Mars, between longitudes of approximately 90 and 130 degrees.

"These were first seen visually by Kuiper in a casual observation of the planet on the morning of March 12 and have since been photographed with the use of color filters by Wright."

END OF BALM

Now Up to Lehman

Albany, March 20 (INS)—Without a word of debate, the Assembly today passed and sent to Governor Lehman the McNaboe bill outlawing breach of promise and alienation of affections suits in New York State. The vote was 134 to 6.

The same measure, sponsored by Senator John J. McNaboe, New York Democrat, was passed in the Senate yesterday. The Governor has given no hint of his views on the drastic step.

LOUIS HOWE

"Steadily Failing"

Washington, March 20 (INS)—The condition of Louis McHenry Howe, the President's secretary, who is ill in the White House, was described as "extremely critical" in a physicians' bulletin issued at 11 a. m. today.

"His strength is steadily failing," the bulletin added.

GIRL'S

Death Gown

SHOWN COURT

The blood-stained, knife-ripped smock worn by Ethel Zuckerman the day she was stabbed in a Harrison avenue, South End, bakery, was exhibited in Suffolk court today.

While spectators turned away after hurried glances, Milton Frank Clark, on trial for his life in connection with the crime, grinned broadly.

The 56-year-old defendant heard Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner, give a detailed account of his findings on the night of the murder.

He heard the doctor tell of finding the girl's body with the knife buried in her neck. He listened to a description of five knife wounds.

Dr. Leary produced the smock that was once green with collar and cuffs that were once white.

He pointed out the two slits near the neck where the knife had gone through.

Dr. Leary testified the girl's skull was fractured in three places besides the five knife wounds.

Patrolman Duncan J. McDonald testified that after Clark's arrest, he admitted to him that he called on Ethel to make a "date" and when she refused him, stabbed her.

DILL FUNDS FACE GRAND JURY ACTION

Both state and federal grand jury proceedings may result from the present investigation of a reported $500,000 to $700,000 shortage in the funds of Dill & Company, Inc., Boston brokerage house, officials said today.

Ordered yesterday to launch a state inquiry, Assistant Attorney General Henry P. Fielding conferred today with John V. Spalding, receiver for the Dill concern and its affiliate, Investors Trading Corporation.

Fielding indicated a surprise development. He conferred by telephone with Attorney General Paul A. Dever who sprained his ankle yesterday and was laid up at home this morning.

Auditors are at work on the Dill accounts.

The assistant attorney-general reiterated that he wanted "to talk" to Harold L. McCormack, whom he described as executive head of the Investors Trading Company as well as president of Dill & Company.

But Mrs. McCormack, at her home in Maine street, Waltham, said that her husband was "away on business, in New York somewhere." Fielding said that McCormack had not been in the state since March 1.

The state prosecutor declared that he had hundreds of letters from persons all over the state claiming they had been defrauded by Boston "bucket-shops." He said:

"This thing is going to be probed to the bottom. It is only the beginning of a cleanup ordered by Attorney General Dever."

SENATE

Votes Curb on

RELIEF BILL

By International News Service

Washington, March 20—The first material limitation of President Roosevelt's power to spend the proposed $4,880,000,000 appropriation for work relief was voted by the Senate today.

It approved an amendment giving government departments and existing agencies sole authority over construction of public highways, public buildings, river, harbor, irrigation and reclamation projects.

The amendment would strip the President of power to create new agencies. A like amendment was beaten earlier in the week.

The Senate started off by rejecting, 69 to 10, an amendment by Senator Schall (R.-Minn.) to liquidate half a dozen federal emergency corporations.

Schall charged they interfered with constitutional rights by competing with private business.

The ten voting for the amendment were all Republicans—Austin, Barbour, Carey, Dickinson, Gibson, Hale, Metcalf, Schall, Steiwer and White.

It contained $962 in cash, an old coin collection valued at $1500, and non-negotiable deeds and mortgages valued at $75,000.

MDIVANI "CHARMS" GET GIRLIE'S BOOS

IN BOSTON

SEVEN OUT OF 8 SPURN HIM AS GIFT

To America's own little 5-and-10 princess, the former Barbara Hutton, heiress to $50,000,000, he may have looked like Prince Charming.

But to Boston's young lovelies Prince Alexis Mdivani adds up to exactly naught in attractiveness.

Seven out of eight wouldn't have him for a gift.

Paraphrasing Francine Larrimore, if any one of them were alone with him on a desert island, they would build them a hut on the side farthest away.

Polly Cotter, debutante of last season, is probably the only girl in Boston who can base her opinion on first-hand knowledge of his Georgian highness. Although only 16 when she witnessed his unprincely inattention to his first bride, Louise Astor van Alen, she made up her mind then that she'd take an American if she ever took anyone.

"I couldn't support the Prince, anyway," said the willowy, blonde Miss Cotter, who had her ideals of princely chivalry rudely shattered at Deauville two summers ago.

"Alexis and the Van Alen heiress were stopping at the same hotel. If those are Continental manners, I'll take a star-spangled floorwalker from a five-and-dime and Barbara can keep the Prince.

Wolfs His Food

"Day after day we watched the hungry Prince wolfing his food and never raising an eye-brow, let alone rising when his bride entered the dining room.

"In other ways he was equally inattentive, playing polo instead of being the dutiful bridegroom, and no girl there envied the then Princess Mdivani her Prince or her millions.

"Barbara probably had this inattention in mind when she said the Prince didn't appreciate her. Both girls are attractive and if he didn't appreciate them why should I expect him to appreciate me.

"Having a title and being called princess would never be sufficient compensation to me for the Prince's unawareness of the amenities."

And Valerie Lundberg of Revere, student at Boston University, did her heart beat any faster at the mention of polo-playing Alexis of the marrying Mdivanis?

1000 Times No!

"No, no a thousand times no. I wouldn't have him for all the 'rocks' in Cartier's.'

Helen Leary, 110 Wilson avenue, Quincy, another B. U. charmer, was equally emphatic.

"Speaking of the marrying Mdivanis," said Helen, "they're no bargain at a dime a dozen. That's all, there isn't any more I have to say on the subject."

Less drastic in her judgment was Mildred Grant of Brookline, the thoughtful sort. Said Mildred:

"He might be nice. You can't believe everything you read in the newspapers. But, peeking between the lines, one gets the ideal that he's a pretty blurred carbon copy of a man."

On the other hand—the engagement one—we have Kathryn Roller, a Bennington, Vermont, girl who now is studying in Boston and living at Bay State road.

"Yes, I'd marry him. Money, looks, position, wealth, a title. And, above all, he has that Continental sophistication. Marriage with him would be bound to be an interesting, if disillusioning experience."

Her "Prince" Found

Jeanne Johnston of Franklin, Pa., pertly pretty and plenty intelligent, just couldn't be bothered.

"I've already found my prince," Jeanne confided, dimpling and blushing prettily. "He's a prince of an American fellow. He's blonde and fascinating and tall—I come up to an inch this side of his chin. Oh, you were asking me about Prince Alexis Mdivani. Pardon my rambling, but, really, I'm not rambling—I'm concentrating on my American prince."

"Me accept a Mdivani if he'd ask me?" Bette Ratigan, 1100 Hubbard road, Dorchester, repeated the question, with a twinkling eye.

"Well, if he did—it would be so sudden—I'd hand him a surprise. I'd tell him he was talking to a stranger because I, myself in person am in love with somebody else. My favorite title for him is 'Darling.'"

Young Astor a Dockworker

Wealthy Youth Gets $25-a-Week Job

By Associated Press

New York, March 20—John Jacob Astor, III, went to work today, down at the docks.

The scion of one of the world's wealthiest families is an assistant to Captain Frederick Fender, assistant marine superintendent of the International Mercantile Marine Company.

Young Astor, married last summer in Newport to Ellen Tuck French, got a clerical job with the I. M. M. Company yesterday. He works in the office at the Chelsea Pier docks.

The first task today was to board the liner President Roosevelt.

There newspapermen saw him and asked the wealthy youth if he was sailing.

"Oh, no," he replied, "I like ships and I'm just looking around."

A short time later, back on the pier, Basil Harris, vice-president of the International Mercantile Marine, disclosed that Astor had started in to learn the shipping business at the bottom.

While officials would not definitely state his salary, it is in the neighborhood of $25 a week.

His older step-brother, Vincent, is a vice-president of the I. M. M., and one of its heavy stockholders.

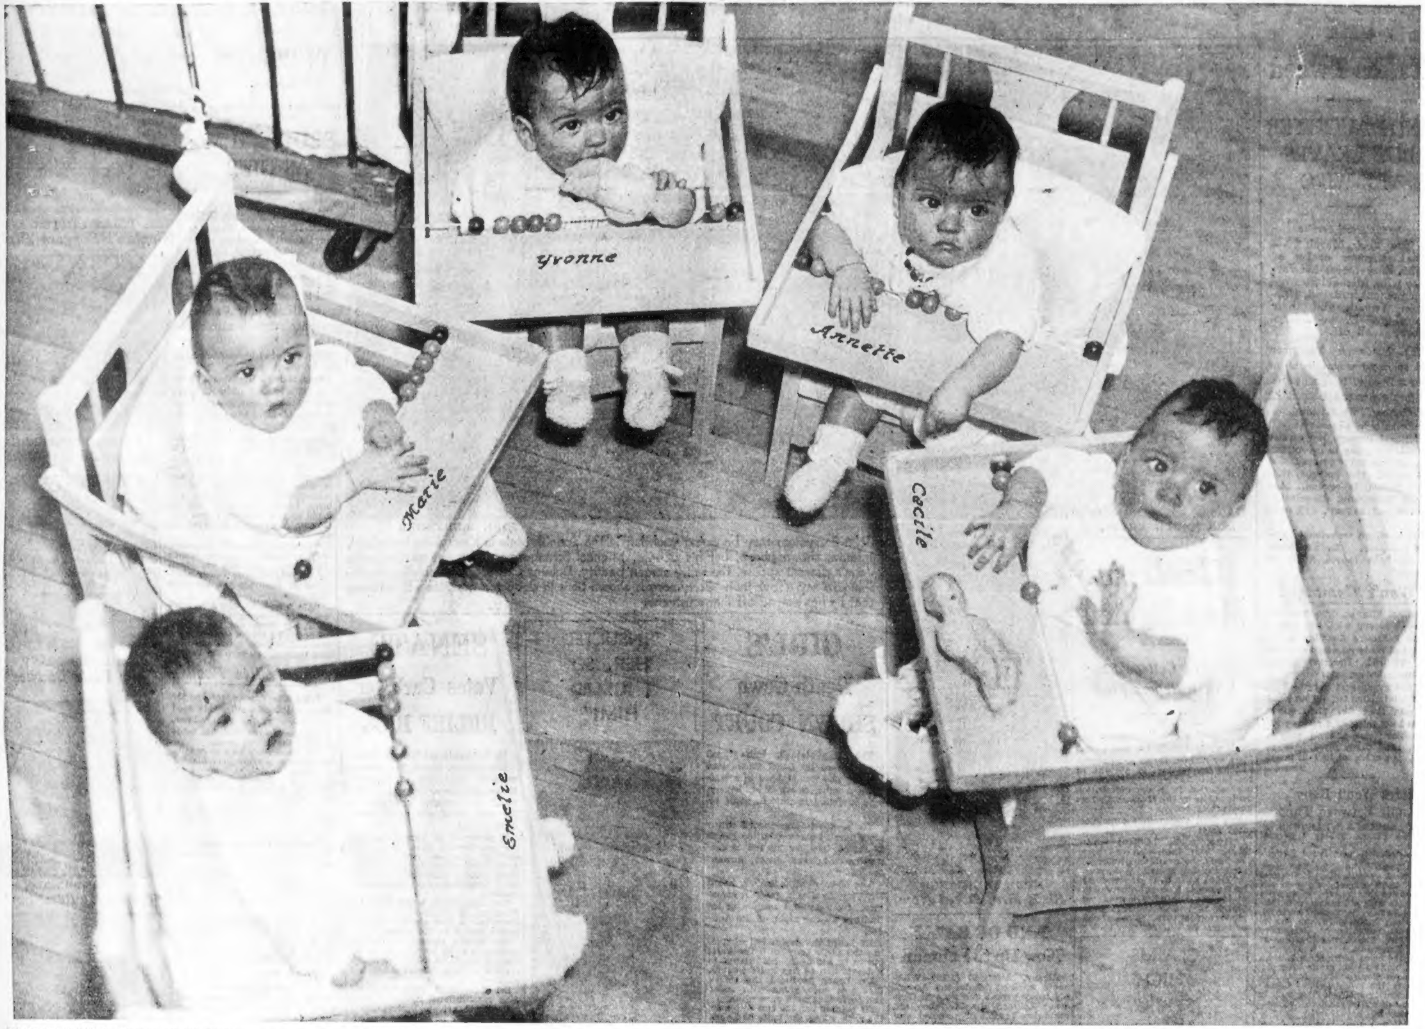
NOT NOW, MR. CAMERAMAN; 'QUINTS' ARE 'IN CONFERENCE'



IN CONFERENCE—Time to talk this business over, in the apparent opinion of the Dionne "quints," Emelie, Marie, Yvonne, Annette and Cecile! It isn't, of course, for grown-ups to know just what's the subject of the grave-faced huddle. Maybe, it's teeth. They're very much a question of the moment. But the quintuplets aren't telling. Though the day'll soon come when they'll speak their minds. Their expressions speak for them, at the present time. "Well," Emelie demands with a hint of belligerence, "What's this picture taking all about?" "Huh? What's that you say?", inquires Marie, none too patiently now. "When do we eat?", Yvonne, the practical "quint," would like to be informed. She's trying out that new tooth of hers on her rubber doll. "Get it over with," commands the imperious Annette, while Cecile, with a gesture of finality, says, "No more, now! Scram! Can't you see we're busy?" DOGS
Hunt Missing
RIEL GIRL

Oxford, March 20—Dissatisfied with police efforts, a score of townsmen are searching the woods for clues to the disappearance of Etta Riel, 20, who vanished here four months ago.

Veteran hunters, with dogs, are included in the party which has secretly been active for two days.

The search is based on the strong local theory that the girl is dead and that her body will be found nearby.

The authorities learned of the search today and District Attorney Owen A. Hoban called State Detective Lieutenant Edward J. McCarthy for a conference. It was believed they would order troopers to join the citizen posse.

McCarthy had advised a local search in the spring but townsfolk tired of waiting for it to begin.

Soviet officials also were worried at the showing of the transport department, called "shameful" in the report, because less than a year ago it was severely rebuked for inefficiency by Josef Stalin himself.

Humble Home of Dionnes Where Quins First Saw Light

(This is the third of a series of articles by James J. Kilgallen of International News Service, who visited the Dionne quintuplets at Callender, Ontario.)

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Callender, Ont., March 20—Happily oblivious of the world-wide interest in their younger sisters, the famous Dionne quintuplets, five other Dionne children live in a humble homestead across the roadway from the Dafoe "hospital."

There the "quins" are receiving expert attention from Red Cross nurses and Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the now celebrated country doctor.

The five older Dionne children range in ages from eight years down to two years of age. They are Ernest, eight; Rose, seven; Theresa, 5; Daniel, 3, and Pauline, 2. Three girls and two boys.

This correspondent, after visiting the quintuplets at the Dafoe nursery, paid a call at the Dionne home across the roadway. The Dionne home, a yellow-painted story-and-a-half, seven-room structure, is a typical Canadian farm homestead and offers a sharp contrast to the spic and span "hospital" where the quintuplets are quartered.

The furnishings are modest and the rooms anything but modern. But the home is famous. For here it was that the quintuplets were born last May 28.

When I knocked at the door, I was asked to come in by the father of this big family—Oliva Dionne. Once inside the door, you saw a fairly large-sized room, with a big stove on one side of it. To the left was a small room, containing a piano. Just back of this room, on the main floor, is the bedroom where the quintuplets were born.

Dionne, father of the quintuplets, sat near the door. He is a slender, medium-height man, with dark hair, dark eyes and a small black mustache. He was friendly. Over near the stove sat his wife, mother of the quintuplets. The father is 31 years old. Mrs. Dionne is only 26, which is remarkable, considering the fact she is the mother of 10 children.

Ready Smile

She is a dark-haired, rather plump woman with a ready smile and a dimple in her left cheek. She is French and has little to say when the conversation is in English. Her name was Elzire Legros before she was married and she was raised in Callender.

"I was born right here," said Dionne, proudly.

He explained they have 300 acres of land, forty-five acres of which is clear for cultivation. He described it as "The Old Homestead." He said he bought it from his father, Oliver Dionne. His father had a fair-sized family—six children, three boys and three girls.

Although the Dionne family made it plain they would like to have all their children—the quintuplets included—to themselves, under one roof, the Canadian government has taken steps to insure that the famous "quints" will not be exploited and would be taken care of properly and in the best of fashion until they are eighteen years of age.

A bill, designed to safeguard the material, physical and spiritual welfare of the quintuplets was introduced in the Ontario legislature by Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario minister of public welfare and municipal affairs, making the infants wards of His Majesty the King until they are eighteen years of age.

Control of the person and estate of the quintuplets is vested in Minister Croll. One specification of the bill is that the children, Yvonne, Annette, Emilie, Cecile and Marie, shall be reared in the religion of their father (Roman Catholic), and that all money belonging to them shall be held in trust by the minister of public welfare until they attain their majority at the age of eighteen.

(Tomorrow: Mr. Kilgallen, in his concluding article, describes the exceptional care given the quintuplets by Dr. Dafoe and the nurses.)

Rome, March 20 (INS)—A new Italian Somaliland border incident today resulted in the filing of a further formal request by Italy with Abyssinia.

The incident, which further strained Italo-Abyssinian relations, was the alleged raiding of an Italian encampment near Agable, in Somaliland, south of Uebishebeli, by an armed band of Abyssinians who reportedly stole 100 camels.

This Is Life by ROBERT E. ROGERS

It appears that the judge who recently handed down the decision in that curious quadrangular wife-trading divorce in Los Angeles is no other than our old friend Judge Ben Lindsay.

Late of Denver, it was Judge Lindsay who once wrote upon "Companionate Marriage" and mixed it with Bishop Manning in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Robert E. Rogers

He is, apparently, no longer suggesting substitutes for marriage. Perhaps as a result of his experience with that case in which two gentlemen traded wives so freely he is viewing American marriage with acute alarm.

He asserts that he is strongly for the old-fashioned marriage, that we must return to science, religion and education in these matters, because he sees the imminent end to marriage in America and "unless we open our eyes to reality and change our whole conception of the relation of the sexes, free love, domestic chaos and sexual anarchy are at hand."

There are people, even people who wish Judge Lindsay well and praise his long labor for the youngsters who get tangled up with the law, who might suggest with some justification that perhaps the judge's own sensational campaign of some years ago for a short term experimental marriage without children—which he called "companionate"—may have had some influence in popularizing the situation which he now bewails.

Offered a Way

However sincere the judge may have been, however sociologically sound his panacea, one cannot blink or dodge the fact that he did publicize an idea full of dangerous possibilities and did bring home to perhaps millions of young Americans a suggestion which offered a way out of their difficulties.

He set ignorant and innocent people to thinking about the possibilities of the short term marriage.

Particularly to people "jest a leetle tetched in the head"—whether intellectuals or plain simpletons—he set forth what seemed an easy, attractive, and reasonably legal way of handling the problem of wedlock. Hence, probably, his wails of anguish.

He still talks sense, however, here and there. He points that our modern system, in which men compete with women for jobs and both tend to postpone marriage till the age of 30 or later, means essentially that very many women are condemned to a life of celibacy.

The men who will not marry until they can support a wife comfortably will usually marry a younger girl, and so a considerable portion of every generation of women will go unwed. And if a working woman gets beyond 30 the chances are that she will keep on working.

Have Failed

The judge claims that seven years ago he predicted that within ten years the number of divorces granted would equal the number of marriage licenses issued and that with three years to go that has almost happened already.

Religion, except in the Catholic church, has already failed to cope with the situation. The Protestants are everywhere lowering their barriers perforce. The schools and colleges teach nothing about it, with the exception of Antioch College, he says.

And everywhere birth control is becoming so much a matter of course that the birth rate today is chiefly among the less intelligent classes, "while the ones who are intelligent enough to have children, except when they want them and are able to care for them, are robbing the nation of some of its best elements."

To obviate that the judge recommends maternal insurance specifically as a means of stimulating the birth rate among superior people.

PARIS PARLEY ON HITLER SET

BRITISH YIELD TO CRITICS OF NOTE TO BERLIN

Lord Privy Seal, to Paris Saturday to talk with representatives of France and Italy before he and Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, go to Berlin to talk over peace with Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

The British informed Italy and Franec that they wanted no action by the Leageu of Nations on France's intended appeal to Geneva until after teh conversations in Berlin and subsequent conversationsi n Moscow and Warsaw have been completed.

They indicated that they want direct information from the governments of Germany, Russia and Poland before they can determine what should be the future of Germany's connection with the League.

The first British consulation with officials of the United States embassy on the new developments took place late this afternoon when Ray Atherton, charge d'affaires of the American embassy, visited Sir John at the latter's request at Sir John's office in the house of Commons.

The foreign secretary informed Atherton of all the events of the last few days and told him officially his and Captain Eden's visit to Berlin and the latter's subsequent visit to Moscow and Warsaw would be "purely exploratory"—the same phrase he had used a short time before on hte floor of the House.

It was officially announced that Captain Eden would represent Britain, that Fulvio Suvich, Italian under-secretary of foreign affairs, would represent Italy, and that Pierre Laval, foreign minister of France, would be their host.

The British were described as having yielded to pressure brought to bear by France and Italy for the conference.

The purpose of the Paris conference is to draft a list of questions representing the joint views of Great Britain, France, and Italy on Germany's future policies toward the League of Nations, Austria, disarmament, an eastern European securities pact, and a mutual aviation pact.

These questions are to be asked of Reichsfuehrer Hitler by Sir John and Captain Eden on Monday.

Mussolini May Take Hand in Second Parley

By Associated Press

Rome, March 20—Italian, French and British diplomats will confer in Paris Saturday on questions arising from the announcement of German rearmament, it was announced today.

The purpose, it was said, is to prepare for a second conference on the basis of the British minister's talks with Hitler, and the visit of Captain Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal, to Moscow and Warsaw.

The second proposed conference may be held in northern Italy, attended by Premier Benito Mussolini himself, in accordance with the French desire to have the head of the Italian government participate in any stand on the matter of German rearmament.

Berlin "Bombed" in Hitler Air Fleet Show

Berlin, March 20 (AP)—Cannon-cracker "bombs" and smokepots gave the German capital a realistic imitation of an enemy air raid today as Germany's newly created air fleet staged a spectacular maneuver.

Shortly after 9 a. m. bombing planes swooped low over the Kreuzberg district, south of the city's center, where residents were warned to get out of the danger zone or, failing that, to stay indoors out of harm's way. Even a cannoncracker has its moments.

The imitation bombs were dropped into big piles of dirt in the streets of the district. Smokepots were touched off on the roofs of buildings as the planes passed overhead, indicating that those houses had been set on fire.

The district abutting the Tempelhow airport, about one-seventh of a mile wide, was isolated from the rest of the city during the bombardment.

When German officials now discuss the Reich's rearmament with foreigners, they emphasize Germany's great aim in restoring her military power is to place herself in a position to compel gradual world disarmament.

The characteristic argument runs as follows:

Hitler has said in one of his Reichstag speeches he would be willing to scrap the last cannon if other nations were willing to do likewise. Instead, other powers have piled up bigger and bigger armaments.

Only if and when Germany has rearmed up to a level commanding international respect can she be a factor in insisting upon universal reduction of armaments.

The Reichswehr ministry disclosed that the Nazi-taught sacrificial spirit has been reawakened once more, as monetary contributions for "reconstructing the German army" flowed freely into its offices.

A labor camp contributed 200 reichmarks (about $80), while others turned in souvenirs and prewar gold coins.

Hundreds of volunteers are reporting for army service by telegraph, Blomberg said, among the volunteers being one complete storm troop detachment.

"Beware of Germany" Flandin Warns France

By Associated Press

Paris, March 20—Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin told the Senate today France must be "vigilant" in the face of a re-armed Germany.

The premier declared he had "complete confidence in the country's fighting strength" and gave the crowded house a picture of the nation's air, land and sea forces.

"Our soldiers," he declared, "would be filled with the same spirit of sacrifice in case of an emergency as they were in 1914.

"The facts made known about German rearmament have existed for a long time. We were informed and figures we were given were even smaller than reality.

"Shall we resign ourselves to German rearmament? Shall we resign ourselves to what would be bankruptcy of the disarmament conference? France intends to continue her disarmament efforts through pacts of mutual guarantees for security.

"If the conception of Hitler's proclamation were accepted by the world," Flandin continued, "it would mark the destruction of peace founded on the League of Nations."

The government sent a formal note to Berlin today protesting Hitler's rearmament and conscription decrees. This was after arranging for the three-power conference here.

It was also understood that the French cabinet has decided to raise the question of Germany's violation of the Versailles treaty before the League of Nations council.

Inasmuch as the league council is not in session, it was pointed out an extraordinary meeting to hear the French complaint would have to be called immediately. However, it would be at least five days before the council can be called under the rules adopted in Geneva in January.

The government was understood to expect nothing satisfactory from Sir John Simon's visit to Berlin, but the three-power meeting was planned in the hope that the British attitude can be stiffened before he goes there.

Roosevelt Urges "Good Neighbor" Policy Abroad

By Associated Press

Washington, March 20—Commenting on the European situation arising from German plans to rearm, President Roosevelt today emphasized what he termed the American principle of the good neighbor and expressed hope that this principle would be extended to Europe as a basis for peaceful solution of difficulties there.

This comment was given newspapermen, crowded about his desk, who asked the position of the United States.

The President declined to say whether any note would be sent to Germany pertaining to her move in abrogating treaty provisions to raise a conscript army.

Likewise, it was said there was no comment on whether an American observer would be sent to the proposed Allied conference of representatives of England, France and Italy. It was indicated, however, none would be sent.

Mr. Roosevelt said he believed the good neighbor principle was a component part of any solution of the world disarmament problem. He reported substantial progress in the last six weeks on details looking toward this goal.

He said a careful consideration of details made the long standing deadlocked Geneva disarmament parley look a little more hopeful.

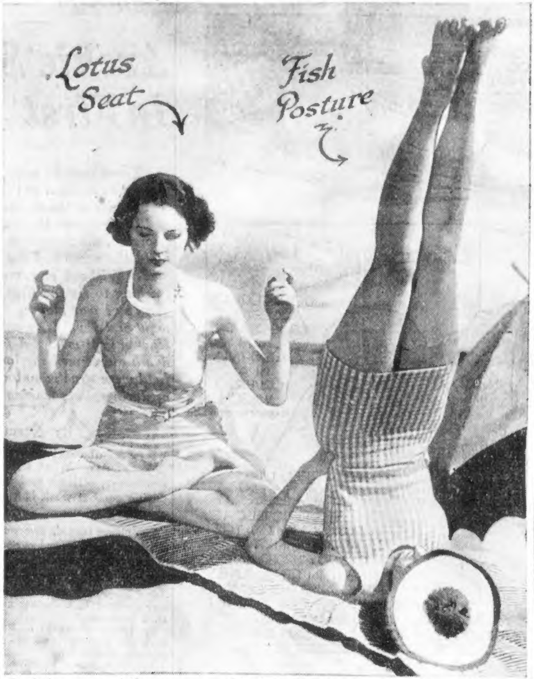
Yoga Shows How to Meditate on Sands



Don't be surprised if you see your friends acting rather queerly on the sands of your favorite beach this summer. In all probability they have spent the winter months absorbing the teachings of the fashionable Yoga philosophers. For instance, the "Lotus seat," demonstrated by the girl at the left, is supposed to be the best position for meditation. At the right is the "fish posture," in which one stands on the back and shakes the legs.

Queer Scenes on Sands; It's Only the Yoga

If you notice girls in queer postures on the singing sands of New England beaches this summer, be not alarmed.

The chances are it will be yoga.

Standing on the backs of their necks, the girls will be only meditating while exercising.

Yoga, you know, (or don't you?) is the strange philosophy of the Hindu mystics.

Francis Yeats-Brown, author of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," who lived many years in India, tells all about it in the current issue of Cosmopolitan magazine.

Yoga means "yoke" and is a system of mental and physical discipline 3000 years old, he explains, suggesting that the exercises may be practised with beneficial results by anyone.

The postures indicate various emotions. The "lotus seat" is considered best for meditation. One sits tailor fashion in a very difficult manner, indeed, and supposedly gains a sense of mental power and clearness.

The "serpent stance" is a nerve tonic and the "fish posture" strengthens neck and back muscles.

TERROR On Desert ISLAND

VICTIMS WIN VERDICTS

By Associated Press

Paris, March 20—Surviving employes of a mid-ocean lobster canning station who were stranded and forgotten for six months on a sun-scorched island in the Indian Ocean, today won their suit for damages.

They charged the French lobster company failed to send relief to the seven workers on the island four years ago.

Four perished before a relief ship arrived with provisions.

The court awarded a woman survivor of the group marooned on St. Paul Island, 30,000 francs (approximately $2000). Three men were awarded 10,000 franc each.

The widows of four of the workmen, who perished, received 35,000 franc each.

Stricken by scurvy and beri beri, two Breton workers and a Madagascar native died before steamer carrying provisions, finally hove into sight December 6, 1930.

Another Breton departed in a fishing boat one day searching for food and never returned.

A baby born on the island to Mme. Le Brunou, the surviving woman, died two months after birth.

Fire had destroyed most of the colony's supplies early in 1930.

In March of the same year, according to the plaintiffs who sued for damages ranging from 100,000 to 350,000 francs, company officials left the seven workers on the tiny volcanic island with only lichen and rushes for vegetation.

The colony's provisions, good for three months, considered of flour, canned spinach and dry beans.

For livestock there were three pigs, four goats and eight sheep.

The animals could not thrive on the barren soil and were killed for food.

Although the cannery was equipped to put 26,000 lobsters into tins daily, the workers, it is contended, rapidly sickened of their monotonous fare.

The only other resources of the "Isle of Terror" were rats and penguins.

Friction On German Colonies

By Associated Press

Geneva, March 20—Dealt a serious blow by Germany's unilateral abrogation of its military clauses, the Treaty of Versailles still contains today a potential source of further friction in the sections depriving the Reich of territory.

The treaty created a new territorial Europe. Many believe that in this lies the real danger to peace, for, as a Balkan statesman recently said, "territorial revision means war."

Germany lost all her rich colonies in Africa the German islands in the Pacific now controlled by Japan, part of Upper Silesia and also Danzig and Memel, which are now dominated by Nazis

Only recently the Saar Basin territory was returned to the Fatherland

There also remains as a treaty restriction the demilitarized zone along the Rhine, which many believe Germany will insist be abolished as a discrimination against German sovereignty

The treaty as a whole has been gradually revised either by necessity or through German unilateral acts.

Treaty demands for the trial of former Kaiser Wilhelm and others accused of World War guilt quickly fell by the boards

Hearst Praise by Norton

City Councillor for Teachers' Oath

The "America First" policies of William Randolph Hearst were extolled by City Councillor Clement A. Norton today in advocating an oath of allegiance for school teachers.

He said:

"I can conceive of no reason why any loyal American, employed as a school teacher, should refuse to take an oath of allegiance to the United States.

C. A. Norton

"It is true that there are only a small number of disloyal persons employed as teachers in the schools of Massachusetts. But if only for the reason of exposing these, this oath should be made mandatory.

"I have a wide acquaintance among school teachers and to date all those with whom I have discussed this oath have given it their approval.

"This is in line with the Hearst policy of America first. This policy has won a warm spot for Mr. Hearst in the hearts of the people of Massachusetts.

HEAVEN HIGH—HELL DEEP

Archie 'Shot Down' In First 'Dog Fight'

Three months after the United States declared war I was enlisted as Private First Class in the aviation service of the Signal Corps. Three more months and I was one of the lucky ones ordered abroad. At Issoudon, the American Aviation Center, we helped build the camp and lay miniature railroads—in the mud. Without any previous training, we started learning to fly the Nieuports, fastest and most dangerous of war planes. We talked, dreamed flying night and day. Then one day I made a "solo" flight. How easy it was! A test pilot was killed, but his death didn't cool my love for flying. One day the field were struck dumb with admiration for a couple of daring pilots making their planes do gymnastics.

By Norman Archibald

WHAT daring! What skill! Who were these two pilots? What flyers could hold, spellbound, the mechanics, officers and pilots at a field where the most daring combat work is a commonplace and everyday occurrence?

The planes landed. Everyone ran over. Anxious and curious to see these great aviators I hurried along.

One jumped out. His red face was wreathed in a familiar grin . . . Beauchamp!

Out jumped the other . . . Follmer! and a prickly sensation of pride ran through me.

"Archie!" yelled Beauchamp. "Talk about fun! Did you see that canvas dummy?"

"I saw you," was my answer. "Follmer and you were wonderful! Great! . . ."

"Oh, shut up!" he laughed. "Come over to the barracks and talk."

Here we were treated as real flyers.

Not a word of air instruction was uttered and we each received a brand new plane with two mechanics to care for it.

My plane, faster and more powerful than any former ship, was a treasure. With no orders, two mechanics waiting below, I, a new individual, flew in a new air world.

A gun camera was mounted rigidly on the front of the machine, and speed, so necessary at crucial moments, made it easy to manoeuvre.

To aim the camera the nose of the plane must be pointed in the direction of the target and the pulling of the trigger took a picture which showed a hit or miss.

We took pictures of the canvas dummy and examined the developed films. We dove on planes in full flight.

Two pilots co-operated for taking pictures in "line of flight." One, with motor throttled to reduce his speed, flew in a straight line while the other, flying at a maximum speed manoeuvred around him at will.

We would zoom up from underneath, dive from the rear, front, side or above, and each time took sight, aimed and pulled the trigger. A good "shot" now meant only a picture but later it would mean an enemy plane. It was thrilling.

To "shoot" was fun. To be the "target" was different, for to fly calmly in a straight line, while an onrushing plane often came within a few feet before swering away, took will power and strong nerves.

* * *

Competitive flying.

The gun camera is loaded, we climb to an altitude of 10,000 feet and on an imaginary aerial path we guard an imaginary border from an imaginary enemy.

"Archie Shot Down"

A plane is seen in the distance. The "enemy," his gun camera loaded, approaches. "Foes" in the air, we 'shoot" at one another. Closer he comes. Maneuvering to keep out of his 'guns" focus, we try, at the same time, to aim our plane's nose at a vital spot. He does likewise, a combat ensues, all one's flying ability is needed and pride alone prevents each pilot from a second's cessation in the furious antics. The pictures will tell the story. There can be no alibi.

This battle royal continues until all films are exposed or one flier, from exhaustion, withdraws.

Combats with unknown pilots are excellent practice. Opponents usually know nothing of each other's air experience or flying personalities. Stiles, whom I had met at Field Seven, was picked for my first opponent.

At nine thousand feet I fly around alone, and for thirty minutes patrol this fanciful battle line. When about to return to the hangar, a plane approaches.

To get a favorable shot at its til I fly in a circle. He does the same. Round and round we fly; smaller and smaller grows the circle, both planes are steeply banked, almost perpendicular, and neither pilot cares to straighten out for fear of exposure. Suddenly my controls become flabby and useless. My plane falls into an unintentional spin, but hoping to elude my pursuer I allow it to fall earthward. After dropping two thousand feet I pull up, glance back and there is the "enemy" diving on me, a perfect target.

Defeated, for had he been using real bullets instead of a camera I would most certainly have been shot down.

Tired, weary and ashamed to be the inferior pilot, I landed and entered the barracks, humiliated. Stiles, who had "shot" me, sat calm and rested on his bunk, but made no comment. Nor did I.

Later, unable to suppress my feelings, I nonchalantly referred to our combat and congratulated him. Still he was smilingly silent. On and on I talked about our antics and during this one-sided parley an instructor strolled in. He listened for awhile, then laughingly interrupted:

"I was your opponent, Archibald."

"You."

So—I had been pitted against one of the best acrobatic aviators at Issoudun. My cheeks were hot with pride.

Some days, choosing a leader, we flew for miles over the countryside and, as he tried to elude us, did whatever he did. It was hilarious!

We "attacked" moving trains. Soldiers, riding on the roofs, lay flat and motionless. Flocks of sheep, attended by a lone herder, would huddle together for protection as we swooped down.

One day the herder tied a white rag to his staff and waved a truce, so we bothered him no longer.

Fliers Rout Fleas

The two pilots who secured the best "shot" pictures and were the most proficient in outwitting air "enemies" were given week-end leaves with a plane to fly wherever they wished. Some returned with stories of Tours, of Paris, of visiting in French chateaux, but many never disclosed their holiday destinations.

* * *

April!

Our spurs are won! Qualified to fly "pursuit"—finished with the eight fields—escaped from Field Nine, where so many friends now rest—we are Chasse pilots.

There were rumors of the great German offensive, driving back English and French allies!

We are like wild horses, waiting to break. But we must go through our paces. One thing more—the French aerial gunnery school at Cazeaux—then to the Front.

Cazeaux.

Again we packed our things, left Issoudun in trucks, boarded a train, changed at Bordeaux and continued about forty miles to Arcachon.

There an army truck drove us to the barracks, about two miles from the flying field at Lake Cazeaux, which is ten miles south of Arcachon and two miles from the Atlantic coast.

Russian soldiers formerly occupied these quarters. An army of fleas were now in active possession. They ran up the walls in disturbed activity and, to escape our onslaught, scurried into crevices and cracks. Our bunks were alive with them. So were we. It was horrible.

"Is this a flea?" An enormous captive was exhibited.

"Perhaps, but it looks more like an elephant."

Beauchamp found some insect powder and ruthlessly scattering it in every direction sang lustily:

"Oh, my mother was an elephant,
My father was a flea,
So we kids are half and half,
What a hell of a pedigree."

Then, holding the can aloft, he chanted solemnly.

"Some day insects will war with men. They shall inherit the earth But not while American aviators still breathe . . . Get the hell out of here!"

* * *

The flying field, skirting one end of the lake, was dotted with observation planes, slow two-seated Caudrons and single-seated Nieuports. Hydroplanes of various sizes and designs rested on the shore and the lake's surface was spotted with racing motorboats.

Six balloons, approximately four feet in diameter, evenly spaced along the shore and fastened to the ground by cables, floated four hundred feet above.

In Nieuports, with machine guns, we drove on the balloon from various angles and, when the balloon was hauled down, the hits were recorded.

A friendly rivalry existed between the French and American pilots. Our pilots had gained a reputation for excelling in accurate shooting from the air and we were anxious to maintain this distinction.

About to go up for my first shot at a balloon, someone whispered.

Target Practice

"Sneak up on it . . . fly close . . . don't open fire until you're right on top of it . . . we've got to beat these Frogs . . . fill it full of holes . . . fly close."

In the air and ready to dive, the advice was remembered. I dove straight toward the floating target, held my plane in a direct line, aimed the gun sights and when a hundred feet from the balloon opened fire, flew nearly upon it, then swerved away.

A sudden lurch. My controls were useless. The expectation of a spill into the lake was certain when somehow my plane righted itself.

He told me to fly close. I did, much too close, and when swerving away my wing tip struck the balloon and tore it open. Luckily it had been but a glancing blow with no damage to the plane, but the balloon, deflated, lay flat on the ground.

Small parachutes played a part. At 5000 feet they were thrown out and shot at as we followed their drifting journey to the earth.

Our speed, as we passed these targets, so easily tossed by the wind and so small, made a "hit" difficult.

When they finally fell to the ground the number of hits, checked against the number of shells, proved the development of the pilot as a marksman.

For further practice a slow plane, usually a two-seated Caudron, flying at a high altitude, towed, about 200 feet behind it, a circular sleeve, six feet long, twelve inches in diameter and tapering to four inches.

As the sleeve was dragged through the air the rush of wind inflated it, thus presenting a round, full target.

Several Nieuport pursuit planes, their speed more than double that of the slow Caudron, flew around and, from every angle, shot at the sleeve-target.

According to rule, no shots could be fired except in a direction away from the Caudron. This necessitated flying ahead, turning and firing as we sped.

Wanting to register as many hits as possible, without using time to refly before the target, we often shot at right angles, turning swiftly, dove and shot again.

EARNING ITS KEEP

Two sisters live together. One is a secretary. The other, a semi-invalid, is housekeeper. The secretary decided to put in a telephone to help her sister in ordering supplies.

"Curiously I have found it of unexpected help to me, too," she reported. "I can communicate with my office if unable to report in person. When walking to the train would mean getting drenched—I now can call a taxi. I can be reached at any time by those who may need to get word to me. So, besides being an invaluable help to my sister, it does enough for me to earn its keep."

If you think a telephone would earn its keep for you, get in touch with your local business office. New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Bundle Tea for Charity Proves Great Success

By BETTY ALDEN

THE DEPRESSION is practically over . . . though almost every columnist in the country has expounded his or her opinion on this subject at some time or another, this is our first venture into the realm of economics . . . but after attending the Bundle Tea yesterday afternoon we were convinced that this summer will bring good times again . . .

MRS. CHARLES SUMNER BIRD, JR.

This particular tea, given to collect bundles of discarded articles which will be sold at the Thrift Shop (organized by society women to aid their charities) in the interests of the Free Hospital for Women, succeeded in surpassing even the most optimistic hopes of the committee as to how many bundles they would receive . . . the answer must be that the friends and acquaintances of this particular charity are discarding "has beens" and trivia that they would formerly have saved for a rainy day, to make room for their new Easter finery . . .

Mrs. George Fearing, who is cruising in the Mediterranean, left her sister, Mrs. J. Murray Forbes, to serve as hostess at the tea at the Fearings' Beacon street home . . . All day long packages of all sizes and colors arrived at the house, but their contents remained a mystery until they were transported to the Thrift Shop for sorting and marking . . .

• • •

Among the Pourers

WE ARRIVED IN TIME to encounter Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., and Mrs. Moses Williams paying their way into the tea by depositing imposing looking bundles with the doorkeepers, Mrs. Richard Saltonstall and Mrs. Arthur Lyman . . .

At the long refectory table where blue flag lilies and yellow jonquils repeated the color accents of the room, we found Mrs. Gelston King pouring a cup of tea for Mrs. Howard Plimpton, a charming young married, who chose a smart light brown ensemble for the afternoon . . . Mrs. A. Barr Comstock joined them in their pleasant discussion of the happy summer diversions they are anticipating . . .

Mrs. Forbes and Mrs. Butler Ames settled themselves on a magenta damask love seat, flanked by two Chinese blue lamps on carved chests, while they sipped tea and exchanged notes on their plans for opera week . . .

Evidently Mrs. Horace Binney and Miss Faith Stanwood contributed their bundles of wearing apparel for they had their tea . . . Mrs. Richard Paine and Mrs. John Pierce exchanged pleasantries over the tea cups, while Mrs. Marland Hobbs, who was one of the few wearing a bright color, mingled with each group to chat . . .

Mrs. Robert Herrick, Mrs. J. Mott Hallowell, Mrs. Harry Hayward were also among the fashionables who presented bundles instead of tickets as their credentials . . .

Fashion Show at Ritz Carlton

REGENCY MODES, vibrant colors and age-old drapery effects may be having their influence on the spring styles of 1935 . . . but the styles themselves are certainly having their influence on Milady, who goes to every fashion show on the social calendar and fills her mind with dreams of herself in the frills and softness and exquisite furs which the stylists decree for the Easter Parade . . .

Yesterday at the Ritz-Carlton there was another large gathering of smart women to view a parade of dresses and suits designed for the more matronly figure . . .

Before the show was over the bothersome question of what to wear this spring was solved by Mrs. Horace S. Frazer, who lunched with a friend and seriously observed the fashion trends . . .

Maria Ducey and her mother, Mrs. John F. Ducey, didn't know when they made a date for lunch at the Ritz that they were to have the added pleasure of watching the show . . . Maria looked very springy herself in her black tight-fitting coat, brightened by a dusty pink ascot and cluster of flowers of the same pink hue . . .

Capes of Brown and White Tweed

MRS. PAUL D. RUST, JR., who has expressed her flare for capes in several striking outfits lately, wore a new one yesterday of brown and white tweed . . . the cape was hem length and very swagger . . . She lunched with Charlotte Sherburne . . .

At a nearby table Leslie Bremer was with a small group, and others dining there were Mrs. Walter Bailey, Miss Mary Iasigi, Mrs. Eugene H. Clapp, Mrs. G. Q. Brown, and Mrs. W. Emerson Barrett in a dark brown ensemble . . .

Barbara McKissock, who is finishing her debutante season with an orgy of fashion posing, modeled several gowns for the debutante's spring evenings . . . one which was particularly becoming to her pale gold hair and winsome beauty was of cocoa brown organza, with a chartreuse green sash . . .

Reggie Boardmans on Bermuda Trip

LIEUTENANT AND MRS CAMERON WINSLOW have just made another of their flying trips to New York to complete that quartet of Winslows which so confuses the social scribes in Gotham . . . Mrs. Winslow and Mrs. Kenelm Winslow, wife of Cameron's cousin, are both named Natalie, so when the four get together they just about stump the writers of who's who in Mayfair . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Reggie Boardman have left their Beacon street home for a vacation . . . with Bermuda their destination it is safe to bet that Mr. Boardman will be found sunning himself on the deck of a yacht in Paget Harbor during most of their sojourn there . . . The Boardmans are members of the yachting crowd on the North Shore in the summer time . . .

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hitchcock, the former Agnes Murchie of Boston, are hearing with interest the tidings that a baby girl has arrived at the Hitchcock household in New York . . .

Folk Lore and Gangsters

TURKEY IN THE STRAW—by MacKinlay Kantor—Coward-McCann.

In this self-styled book of "American Ballads and Primitive Verse," Mr. Kantor again shows his intense admiration for the "marching" past of American history.

But his approach in this work differs sharply from the realistic treatment in "Long Remember." His affection for the braver days here becomes openly nostalgic and at times sentimental.

He knows of what he writes, however, and the book should win praise as a contribution to the folk lore of our country.

His pulsating rhythm is clearly shown in these few lines from the first section of the book:

And some say the little flags
Snapped like stars
To the drum, drum, drum
Of those redskin bars;
And I saw Yankee men
Pushing up their stones,
And dancing to our fifes
On splinter-new bones.

"Turkey in the Straw" does not live up to its brilliant predecessor but those who enjoyed that earlier work will find much of the Kantor flavor in this latest work.

TEN THOUSAND PUBLIC ENEMIES:— By Courtney Ryley Cooper—Little, Brown and Company.

Here is an almost complete record of mad dogs and their activities through America's slimy prohibition era, and from repeal to date when America is still suffering from her dry era hangover.

Written by a former newspaperman who, since deserting the news rooms, has made a hobby of investigation, this volume has a collection of facts and details amazing.

Confidante of federal officials in high places, Cooper has had a rare opportuntly to view the inner workings of the Division of Investigation of the Department of Justice—and with that background he tells the story of crime in America.

You will get revelations here of things that the majority of staid law-believing citizens have never even suspected.

HIGH SCHOOL TRAGEDY

By Maxine Canty

Janitor Gone; Is It a Clue?

SYNOPSIS

Julie Martin, she's all of 17, is relating what happened after her French teacher, pretty Constance (Connie) Sinclair, was found shot dead at a desk in her (Miss Sinclair's) apartment. Julie has startled her mother and interests her father, a lawyer, by telling that she and her boy friend, Dicky Ward, had visited the apartment the previous afternoon, a few hours before the murder.

She had returned a fountain pen which she had borrowed from Miss Sinclair. Newspaper reports make known that the teacher was slain about 10 o'clock that night. The police went to the apartment upon receipt of a mysterious telephone call informing them that Miss Sinclair had been slain.

Julie's young brother, Allen, also a high school pupil, leaves the breakfast table soon after the family starts discussing the tragic news. At the school later, Police Inspector O'Brien questions Julie concerning the return of the pen, basing his inquiry on notes made during an earlier examination of Mrs. Sardoni, who conducted the apartment house tenanted by the slain teacher.

Julie tells the inspector that she talked with Miss Sinclair about a book. Principal Perkins remarks that he found the book on the teacher's desk that morning and gets permission to return it to the rental store.

As Julie is leaving, she admits the last known caller on Miss Sinclair—Melvin Wright, described by Mr. Perkins as "the school's problem boy." Julie wonders what happened during Melvin's star chamber session with the Inspector and the Principal.

CHAPTER III

That night Dicky came over, and did we have a lot to talk about. He had been questioned, too, and had told you the same story I had. We were awfully puzzled over the pen. Then, too, Dicky did not know about Melvin's being there that night. Did I astound him with that espisode!

Letters to Write

The accounts began with Miss Sass and Miss Whelton's calling at 7:00 o'clock that night to ask Miss Sinclair to the movie, and her refusal. She said she had letters to write.

All the letters were addressed to "Dear George." The first paragraph of the final one was printed in full. One San Francisco paper carried a facsimile of it in her handwriting, with the heading: TEACHER'S ILLICIT LOVE REVEALED.

Mother thought that disgusting, and so did Dicky and I. We both knew Miss Sinclair was all right.

I have kept all the clippings about the murder and made a scrapbook. So I copy this from that paper. It is the letter.

"Dear George:

"I have tried so hard to begin this letter tonight. It is very difficult to know how to say this so that you will understand and believe me. When we knew each other back home, and we were both kids and crazy about each other, I might have married you and been fairly happy. But please believe me, George, when I say that I don't love you now. Years have passed and everything is different.

"In the first place, you are married to someone else. I know we said that your marriage should make no difference in our friendship, when we first met again in San Francisco. I tried to be modern about it, and I thought we had a right to the old interest and affection that were left. Perhaps I was wrong: I still think I was right—had things stayed that way.

Tells of 'Scene'

"But they haven't. You have come over here so many weekends that even the apartment house manager asked me if you were my fiance. And we cannot have another scene like Sunday's.

"Then, too, I have seen your wife. Now don't be angry with her. I rather admire her for coming straight to me with what she had to say. Of course, she blames me for everything and she thinks we are having a real 'affair.' I am afraid I lost my temper, too.

We had rather a row. I know I said a lot of foolish things, among them that I saw no reason for sacrificing our friendship. She went away thinking I was thoroughly bad and shameless, I'm afraid.

"I decided not to tell you anything about it when I saw you Sunday. But after that scene in the car, I began to see it all differently. Your wife was right. This can't go on. I am telling you the positive truth when I say that I don't want to see you again. Please believe—"

There the letter ended—"stopped by a bullet," the paper said. There was a lot more. First of all, Mrs Sardoni had seen a woman enter Miss Sinclair's apartment the week before.

It was supposed that this was "George's" wife. Police in Seattle were checking with Miss Sinclair's family and friends for the possible identity of this mysterious couple. Mr. Sinclair, the murdered girl's father, would arrive that evening.

But to continue the events of the evening of October 20, as they say in detective stories. (I am reading them now, occasionally), Mrs. Sardoni had seen another visitor enter about 8:00 o'clock, a young man whose description she had given police. Reporters had not discovered who he was. Of course, Dicky and I knew it was Melvin Wright.

Reasoning by Dicky

He had left about 8:30, slamming down the stairs as if he were angry, too. The reporter pointed out that from the number of starts and the length of the final letter, Miss Sinclair must have had more time to spend on it than the three-quarters of an hour which had clapsed between the teachers' call and the boy's.

In other words, she must have been alive when he left.

"I don't see that," said Dicky. "I mean, I don't see why that proves he didn't kill her."

"You don't think he did, do you?"

"Well, no. But look. What was to prevent his returning an hour or so later and shooting her, if he was so mad? And here's another thing: how do these guys know she wasn't working on that letter ever since we left at five. She probably didn't take so much time for supper.

"And it doesn't look to me as if it took so long to write once she got going. It sounds pretty much the way anyone might talk."

We went on reading. Mrs. Sardoni had seen no one else enter. She had had a headache and gone to bed at 9:00. As her apartment was right underneath Miss Sinclair's and as she heard no shot, the police suppose the slayer had used a silencer.

The telephone call had come at 10:45. The officers sent out on the case had found the door of Miss Sinclair's apartment unlocked, had opened it, and found her in jade-green lounging pajamas, half-supported by the desk chair, her arms and head sprawled on the desk itself, and a bullet through her breast.

I cried a little at that, and Dicky was most awkward. Just as he was patting my shoulder, a newsboy called, "Extra!"

We both dashed to the street and bought the paper. The police had revealed a new development.

Hym, the Filipino janitor of the apartment house, had disappeared on the night of the murder!

Read in the next installment how the detectives search a student suspect and bring a revolver to light.

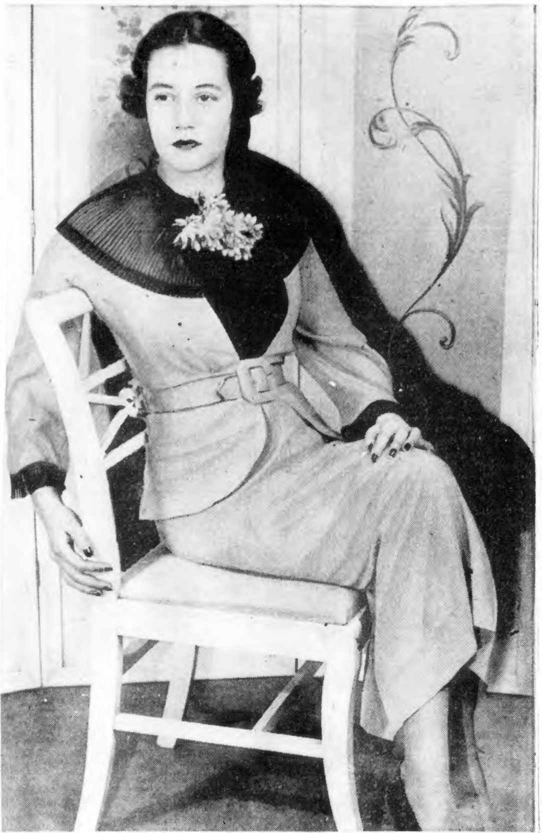
For Before-Dark Gayety



By ANNICE BRINK

Now that the cocktail hour will shortly come to mean a time when sun slants down lazily and there is a breathless green haze in the air as even city trees begin to bud—you'll want something to wear that's on a parallel with the freshness, the exciting, lovely time called spring. Particularly if the cocktail hour brings with it someone rather important to little you . . . what better frock to don than this one of pale hyacinth with a bodice of soft, deep brown net and an edging of pleated brown net peeping out of the jacket's bracelet sleeves. The bodice is sleeveless, the skirt street length. Budget, too.

Miss Beatrice de Menocal of Beacon street, who is frequently mentioned as being among society's superlatively well dressed, models for us.

The hyacinth sheer jacket frock is from a Boston shop; for further details, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Radiation of Nature in Face Cream

By the Beauty Editor

IF YOU ARE REALLY serious about keeping time in check—bidding a farewell to age—a sensational new beauty salve will probably do the trick.

This is the season of year when we rightfully expect exciting goings-on in the cosmetic world, but when we hit upon something so utterly new as to be extraordinary, it's little wonder our editorial ravings are what they are.

When birthdays threaten to become too much for you, and your skin doesn't seem to look young and fresh any more, it's time you heeded storm-flag warnings and got busy with your face.

Here is where this miracle-working salve comes in. It comes in a tube, and you "paint it on your face with a brush. It looks blood colored on your skin — not at all pretty—but when you wash it off, your skin is transformed into a thing of beauty.

Your cheeks will have a glow that no rouge has ever been able to achieve for you, and what is more, your skin will look young and blooming and fresh for three or four days.

Young things with fine, dry skins will go mad over it because it will keep their skins eternally moist and dewy. Older women whose skins don't look as young as they would like, will bless me for this news. It's especially effective for dry, sensitive skins which are prone to fine lines and wrinkles.

This sensational salve has been used for years by stage stars and society leaders in a famous Fifth avenue salon. Only now, however, has it reached the cosmetic counters of department stores. After one treatment of this cream I am sure you will agree with me that it is like nothing you have ever seen or used before.

To learn the name of this extraordinary salve for fine, dry skins, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a reply.

Beauty Answers

Question—I am only 16 years of age, but am very discouraged with the appearance of my figure. My back is already slightly round-shouldered and I have a protuding stomach. I do not go in for exercises and sports, so am puzzled as to what course I should follow. I am anxious to have a nice looking figure for summer, so please advise me.

Barbara S., Quincy.

Answer—Girls of 15 and 16 should not worry if their figures do not come up to their ideals of beauty. There is not always uniformity of growth. Time will bring correct proportions, so do not fret. However, you must cultivate a graceful carriage. Hold your stomach in, stand erect, and throw your shoulders back. Send for my set of back exercises, they will do wonders in limbering you up and making you less self-conscious of your faults. Merely enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope when you send of these exercises.

MADGE'S SON AND COUSIN DISAPPEAR

CHAPTER 297

How I kept from screaming at sight of the empty room where Junior and Roderick had been sleeping, and into which Lillian had gone only two minutes before to look for them, I do not know.

Of course, my common sense told me that their absence from the room, where they had been sleeping so soundly, was easily explainable.

But my nerves had been worn to the proverbial fiddle strings by the bizarre events which had invested the festivities of Mary's wedding.

I forced myself to reason that if anything were wrong with the small boys, Lillian, efficient and poised, was already on the job, and, with hands that trembled but did not drop her, I put my baby into her crib.

LILLIAN STARTS SEARCH

With pounding pulses and shaking hands, I made the round of the doors and windows of the nursery suite, seeing that they were all fastened tightly, then, heedless of the fact that I was clad only in bathrobe and slippers, with my hair in braids down my back, I went through the door separating Faith's bedroom from that in which the small boys had slept.

Locking this door behind me, I went on through the door into the hall, finding it ajar as Lillian must have left it, for there was no other exit from the boys' room save the one I had just locked.

The key was not in the door, I noted, with a fresh acces of terror, for I had tested that lock myself upon my last nocturnal visit to the room.

And when I had closed it after me and stood looking up and down the corridor, I could see no one, hear no sound.

Then from below stairs I heard Lillian's voice calling softly: "Junior! Roderick! You rascals! Where are you hiding? The joke's on us! Come on out, now, Junior! Your mother will be terribly worried!"

Her voice was carefully pitched, so that no one sleeping above stairs could possibly hear it.

"HUGH! HUGH!"

If I had not been out in the hall, with my ears stretched for every sound, I could not have caught that low, insistent call; which, I knew instinctively, she considered almost hopeless of answer, but was giving it solely that she might overlook nothing in her search for the boys.

She was proceeding methodically and efficiently, and my common sense told me to go down and join her in the search.

But I had left my sanity in the room where I had seen empty cots instead of the curled up figures of my small son and his cousin, and there was only one idea dominating my brain—to get more help in my search for the children.

Dicky!

My husband, of course, was my first thought, but Dicky, alas! was five miles away in the hospital.

My father! Yes, I must tell him. But I needed someone in the full strength of manhood, and it was with the feeling of one running with gasping breath to the only person qualified for rescue that I dashed down to the hall, pounded upon the door behind, which Lee Chow was being guarded, and called the name of the man who once before had brought my small son back to me, and who had more than once risked his life for me and mine.

"Hugh! Hugh! Quick!"

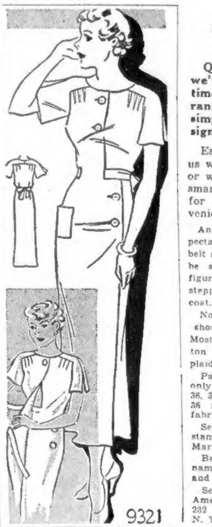
Neatest Trick

Comfy Wrap-Around Frock



By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9321

Quite the neatest trick we've observed for a long time is this cleverly arranged, yet delightfully simple, home frock designed by Marian Martin.

Especially nice for those of us who gain and lose weight or who just naturally love a smart looking wrap-around for sheer comfort and convenience.

And, of course, a boon to expectant mothers. Note how the belt slips through a slit and may be simply adjusted to fit the figure. Meanwhile, one has stepped right into it as into a coat.

No petticoat needed. Nice shoulders and back, aren't they? Most attractive in solid color cotton broadcloth or printed or plaid cotton of any sort.

Mrs. Coolidge's Drop Cookies

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

HOW ABOUT the cooky jar these days?—that delightful old custom that has been in vogue since grandmother's day.

It is ideal to have one well stocked for hungry children, coming home starved from school, for in-between snacks for grown-ups and for the finishing touch to a dessert of fruits in season.

We are giving today a favorite drop cookie of Calvin Coolidge's mother, using bran and molasses, a nourishing and satisfying date-filled cookie, an oatmeal cookie, tasty with raisins, spices and nuts and a sour cream cookie, rich and tender which can be varied by adding chocolate, fruits, spices or nuts.

MRS. COOLIDGE'S DROP COOKIES

1 cup sugar
2-3 cup molasses
1 cup hot water
1 teaspoon soda in hot water
½ cup shortening
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt, cinnamon, cloves
2 cups bran

Cream shortening, add sugar and molasses and soda. Sift together flour, spices and mix with bran. Add alternately with hot water. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto a cookie sheet and bake in a moderate oven, 375 deg. F., for 10 minutes.

FILLED DATE COOKIES

1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
½ cup sour milk
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups flour
2 cups rolled oats

Mix in order given. Chill. Roll very thin, cut in rounds and put together with a spoonful of filling. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., until well browned.

Filling

2 cups pitted dates, sliced
¾ cup sugar
1 cup boiling water
2 teaspoons lemon juice

Cook until thick. Cool before using.

Advice on LOVE

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Please do not think of me as Victorian. On the contrary, I pride myself on being modern, but I am not as modern as my wife.

"We were engaged for three years before we were married and had much in common. We were both passionately fond of music. She played the piano and I the violin, and we had delightful musical evenings together. We were both fond of reading, and we liked to walk and row on the river in summer.

"On our wedding tour, which was to last a month, she amazed me by leaving at the end of three weeks and joining some friends of hers at a house party. I was invited, but declined to go, and I felt pretty indignant about it. But my wife, after trying to persuade me to join her friends, went off as carefree as if she were a single girl. My emotions over that can be imagined.

"Six months after we were married she returned to her old job. She claims she still loves me, and I must say she treats me with every courtesy and much consideration, but when I can support her in comfort I can't see why she wants to work. She tells me there isn't enough to do around our small apartment, and she'll get into mischief if she hasn't a steady job.

"HUSBAND."

The French have a proverb that in marriage, the one loves and the other is loved. Your letter recalls this maxim.

But, as you tell me that she is always courteous and considerate, it seems to me your marriage should be regarded as successful. When a man marries a modern girl, he has to accept her modern ideas. Apparently you married one.

All said and done, your life together may wear better and endure longer than if you had married a highly emotional girl who spent her time on the heights or in the depths, questioning her love for you.

Evidently your wife is of the self-contained type. Presumably she has not repented of her bargain, or she would not treat you so well.

To me, you seem to have much for which to be thankful.

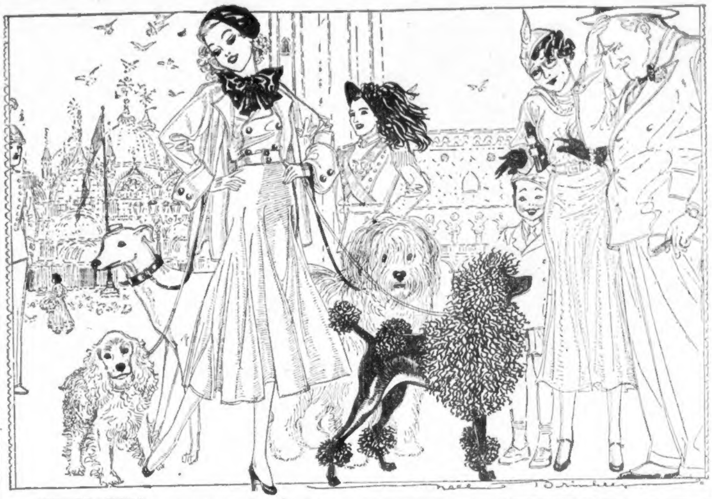
Fortunes of Fanny

Italy—Romance in the Air!

By Nell Brinkley



THE GRACIOUS, romance-nurturing air of sunny Italy! On the street dark handsome eyes turn frankly to admire the pretty blonde "Miss." How very nice!

Fanny has arrived here; and already Mother and Father are groaning, "Now Fanny!" But now it is "Now FANNY!" You see when Fanny first fell in love with England and her Englishman, she thought it would be "sweet" to have a English sheep-dog . . . just to harmonize with things, you know.

In France it was a corded poodle, dark and sharp and neat like Francois himself. By the time she reached Italy there was quite an entourage of pets. Then, of course, there was the spaniel to remind her of the clerk at home. And Fanny didn't wait for the grand passion to strike again—she bought herself a beautiful greyhound such as Beatrice D'Este, or Isabella of the "pot of basil" must have had beside her chair when she dined.

"There'll probably be some enchanting man in my life soon so I might as well have 'Fortuno' to match!" she says.

Father says, "I had better get her home, and safely married to some bright young American as soon as I can!"

Mrs. Beeckman

Use of Word "Invitations"

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I wish you would settle an argument for us regarding the terms "invite" and "invitation." A says, "I had an invite to dinner at his home." B says, "I had an invitation to dinner at his home." A says that since she was asked in person it would be an "invite." B says, "Must an invitation be in writing to be called an invitation?"

Please tell me who is correct.

C.

The word invite cannot be used as a noun. B is correct when he says, "I had an invitation to dinner at his home." The fact that one is asked in person does not change this. A should be very careful never to say, "I had an invite to dinner." This grammatical error is in the same unfortunate class with "I am dark-complected"!

FIVE O'CLOCK WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To settle a dispute, will you kindly advise the correct dress for a church wedding at 5 p. m.?

For a 5 o'clock formal wedding, the bride wears the traditional bridal dress and bridal veil, and for an informal wedding at this time she wears an afternoon dress or an ensemble or her traveling suit. The guests wear day clothes, their most formal day clothes for a formal wedding.

HIGH SCHOOL CLASS RING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Wil you please tell me on what hand and finger a high school class ring should be worn? D.

Usually high school class rings are worn on the little finger of the right or left hand, but this is a matter of choice. However, the decision must be made beforehand, so that accurate finger measurements may be made.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Fashion Flashes

SILK TAFFETA petticoats in high colors rustle under wool suits which sometimes have matching silk taffeta blouses in the basque or tailored variety. Silk taffeta petticoats with neat pleated ruffles are worn, too, under knitted suits, giving a graceful line to knit skirts which always have a tendency to hug the figure—a tendency now completely demode.

THE FLOWERS that bloom in the spring on silk looms go without saying. Like ivy they ramble over practically every weave and texture in a burst of color. Large florals widely spaced are new on skirts that billow peasant fashion. The vogue for pleats, shirrings, quilting and tucks generally suggest more widely spaced florals. There are new and slenderizing strips, vivid florals in scattered and allover treatments, novelties, as bird and shell motifs, butterflies, and rope patterns. Fashion this spring does everything from weaving, printing, to painting your dots on. Polka dot silks are sometimes shirred for whole jackets, giving them a very new look when worn over wool or silk shirts.

Warp prints are particularly rich looking and make dramatic ¾ length coats to be worn over wool or silk skirts and mousseline de soie blouses or organdy with huge jabots.

The Vienna Coup

By Josephine Culbertson

The Vienna coupe is one of the most spectacular plays in Bridge.

The effect is to set up a card in an opponent's hand, but the gift is only temporary since the opponent will meet a squeeze and be obliged to relinquish that card or another equally valuable.

Mr. Charles H. Goren of Philadelphia contributes an example of this play.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	1 ♠	Pass	4 ♠ (1)
Pass	Pass	5 ♣ (2)	Pass
Pass	5 ♠ (3)	Pass	Pass
Double (4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) A testimonial of faith in Mr. Goren's spade suit.

(2) A good sacrifice bid, as the cards lie, but from West's angle an out-and-out gamble.

(3) South is unwilling to accept a penalty.

(4) Not a good double.

West opened the three of clubs, East winning with the Ace. The Ace and a small spade followed, declarer winning the second round. The King of clubs was cashed, North discarded a diamond, and a low club was ruffed.

At this point a moment's thoughtlessness loses the hand for declarer.

If he should forget to cash the diamond Ace, the contract cannot be made as dummy will be squeezed before East. The diamond finesse, in view of the double, and West's confession of defensive weakness (the sacrifice bid) is a forlorn hope.

The better chance is to play East for the Queen-Jack of hearts as well as the King of diamonds.

Mr. Goren accordingly laid down the Ace of diamonds and returned to his hand with the King of hearts.

The rest of the trumps were then played, dummy discarding all of the diamonds. On the last trump East was squeezed.

He had his choice between discarding a heart, which would establish dummy's nine and the diamond which would establish Mr. Goren's Queen.

He chose the heart in the hope that his partner held the ten-spot. Declarer took the last two tricks with the Ace and nine of hearts.

R. H. HEMPHILL SAYS:

POLITICS HINDER BANKING REFORM

By ROBERT H. HEMPHILL
Financial Authority

The introduction to H. Parker Willis' comprehensive new book, "The Banking Situation," contains statements from this eminent authority of such vital significance that the highlights at least should be most widely published.

No one in the United States is more confident than Dr. Willis to speak upon these subjects. He has long been recognized as the leading financial authority sympathetic with, if not representative of, international banking sentiment of Wall Street.

His tutorship of, and close association with Carter Glass, formerly chairman of the banking and currency committee of the House and later of the Senate, who more than anyone else of recent years has dominated the progress of financial legislation in the United States, enables Dr. Willis to speak with certainty of the political manipulation by which fundamental improvements in the banking-monetary system have been consistently prevented.

Dr. Willis says:

"For the past several years it has been evident, even to the casual students of banking and of the general industrial situation in the United States, that a fundamental reform or reorganization was inevitably necessary. The inadequacy of the American banking system to provide for the requirements of business has long been evident.

"The measures which were taken during the years 1931 and 1932, for the improvement of banking conditions, were entirely of the sort classified as 'relief,' and in no case partook of reconstruction, reform or improvement.

Changes Needed

"The state of things revealed by the breakdown of 1933 has shown that there is need for complete rectification and reconstruction even of the very foundations upon which the present day banking system of the United States rests.

"To those who recognize any measure of truth in the general indictment of the situation thus outlined, the question must naturally occur: why is it that the United States, perhaps the wealthiest country in the world, perhaps also that country in which the widest distribution of income has taken place, should have suffered particularly from such adverse conditions?

"In most countries legislation on the subject of banking originates in one of two ways. It may, first of all, be proposed by the administration of the country.

"In some other countries the banking community itself succeeds in exercising a general jurisdiction over the conditions that surround its own operations and has the wisdom from time to time to acquiesce in changes designed to give the public what changes are demanded by circumstance even though such changes might not appear advantageous to the members of the banking community itself.

Fail to Agree

"In the United States we have not been willing to assent to either of these methods. American bankers have practically never been willing to agree among themselves about changes in banking laws.

"There is probably no country in the world in which there is a greater approach to the real existence of a so-called 'money trust' than in the United States. NOR IS THERE ANY COUNTRY IN WHICH THERE IS LESS ASSURANCE OF NON-PARTISANSHIP AND FAIRNESS IN THE EXTENSION OF CREDIT IN BANKS TO INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS.

"It is seldom that there can be any actually frank Congressional debate about currency or banking questions. Most such discussions have been largely personal recrimination or an appeal to prejudice based on "anti-trust" and other allied ideas or an effort to stir up popular prejudice or imaginary fears of one sort or another.

"For many years it was the practice of the banking community to secure the "pigeonholing" or ignoring of new legislation by the familiar methods of legislative obstruction and control.

"When these forms of opposition lost their force or were unsuccessful, proposed changes of law were often either referred to committees around which special interests clustered, or they were made by legislators who were determined to prevent any further growth or development of arguments of the kind thus contemplated.

"In other cases, such legislation was allowed to reach a fairly advanced stage, and then was called up for "hearing" before some committee, at which time a joint onslaught by banking interests developed for the purpose NOT OF IMPROVING OR STRENGTHENING THE LEGISLATION, BUT MERELY OF RENDERING IT RIDICULOUS, OR AT ANY RATE UNPOPULAR, AND OF RELEGATING IT TO THE BACKGROUND."

Professor Willis' expose is timely. Important banking legislation is now before the banking and currency committee of both the House and the Senate. On its disposition hinges our hope of recovery and may hinge the fate of our democracy.

Arrests Due In Party Killing

Postponing momentarily questioning of 50 or more municipal, state and federal notables, police said they hoped today to arrest two men who beat Arthur T. Suprenard of Cambridge, causing his death.

Suprenard died at Haymarket Relief Hospital a short time after he had been brought there from a downtown hotel, where a testimonial dinner, at $10 a plate, was being held.

After questioning about 30 of the 140 persons who attended the dinner, Captain Thomas M. Towle of Milk street station, stated that he expected to talk to persons who were in the hallway where the attack took place.

It was possible that a number of girl entertainers at the dinner would be among those quizzed, although police indicated the contrary.

According to reports given the authorities, some of these girls were close to the spot where Suprenard was punched twice. It was the second blow that sent him to the floor, fracturing his skull.

Two persons, whose identities police say are known to several persons, but concealed, allegedly made the attack.

Suprenard was married, father of three children. He was 41 and lived in Sacramento street, Cambridge.

Fatherless in Mystery Death

The death of their father, Arthur T. Suprenard, at the hands of unidentified assailants at a downtown hotel dinner sent tragedy into the lives of Barbara and Robert Suprenard, of Sacramento place, Cambridge.

Pair Injured

Mrs. Mabel Estey of Highland avenue, West Somerville, was reported on the danger list today at Lowell General Hospital, as the result of injuries suffered when the car in which she was riding struck a stone wall in Tyngsboro.

Philip Maguire of Lowell, driver of the car, was reported in dazed condition at St. John's Hospital.

Gov. Curley to Be Invited To I. J. Fox Store Opening

Governor Curley will receive I. J. Fox and David Lilienthal at the State House today when the officials of the I. J. Fox Fur Company will present to the governor the inscribed trowel he used to lay the cornerstone of the New I. J. Fox building.

The governor is to be invited to preside at the formal dedication and opening of the new store at 10 a. m. Friday. City and state dignitaries will attend as well as the leading merchants of New England and New York city.

Mme. Lyolene, French designer, will make her first visit to Boston tonight to be present at the opening.

With Mme. Lyolene will be six mannikins wearing her newest creations. A group of I. J. Fox officials and several New England fashion writers will greet Mme. Lyolene on her arrival at South Station tonight.

Albert Elias, designer of the building, arrived here for a final inspection. He said:

"The new I. J. Fox store will provide a feast for the eyes when it opens Friday morning."

Elias considers the building one of his crowning achievements.

It was a matter of pride with a host in Colonial days that his guests should smoke tobacco grown on his own plantation

Today the Governor of North Carolina says to the Governor of South Carolina—
"Have a cigarette"

TODAY people all over the world use tobacco in one form or another.

They chew it, they smoke it in pipes, they smoke cigars and cigarettes, and here is what an eminent physician said about cigarettes:

"I have been something of a student of cigarettes, and it is my belief that they offer the mildest and purest form in which tobacco is used."

Yes, nowadays the cigarette is the most popular form in which tobacco is used. A good cigarette certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 20, 1935

AUSTEN LAKE on

Six Little Braves Still Sit on Holdout Fence

IF EVER A MAN HAS LIVED in quiet desperation, beset by squalling debtors and whipsawed between Need and Desire, that one is Judge Emil Fuchs of the Braves, who is busier in Boston than a lunch-cart chef, with his suspenders busted and a dozen orders on the fire.

Austen Lake

The Judge is in the Northland, where his pre-season ticket sale is inching along at turtle speed, while the April 5 deadline, when he must dump a wagon-load of dollars into his bankers' bins, is racing toward him like a frightened rabbit.

But his heart is in the South, under the sun and palms of St. Petersburg, where he has six sullen, unsigned holdouts — Brandt, Frankhouse, Mangum, Rhem, Spohrer and Lee, who are yelling for him to come and sweeten the kitty.

In past training seasons Judge Fuchs held holdout court in his Soreno (St. Pete) Hotel suite, where disgruntled players came to sue for more salary and remained to listen to the Judge sooth and smooth in his low, judicial drone.

And presently, with an ante here and a honeyed word there, the malcontents went away satisfied.

* * *

But Don't Call Me George!

NOW, WITH THE TRAINING PERIOD in its later stage and the season just around the bend, Fuchs is hobbled at home, instead of being South with his diplomatic fingers on the pulse of his fevered patient.

Being essentially a showman of the P. T. Barnum type, who delights in amazing the people with sensational oddities, these financial snarls have irritated the Judge, who frets at office detail and money matters and craves the untramelled freedom of the open air where bands play, flags fly and happy people shout.

He would love now to be basking in Babe Ruth's reflected light and patting away the unease of Bill McKechnie and the rest of the Braves like a patient helpmeet with an hysterical family

As it is, he writes occasional letters to Ruth, saluting him as "Dear George," unknowing that George is the one title which the Babe detests and sends his bushy brows lowering and his bass voice snarling.

I discovered this only lately when Alan Gould, the A. P. sports editor, greeted Ruth as he came into his dressing closet with "Morning, George!" And on the instant Babe's bronsed, jovial mask, with cheeks like well-baked biscuits, melted into a sour pug and his bull-frog voice bellowed, "Don't call me George."

* * *

Babe and McKechnie

IN THE RELATIONSHIP between Babe and McKechnie there are no telltale signs of antagonism, such as existed between Babe and Joe McCarthy with the Yankees last year when the two studiously ignored each other and sat on the bench with long intervals of horizon-gazing.

Babe's attitude, as he shares the manager's locker room, is as docile and artless as an over-sized schoolboy. McKechnie's is one of patient puzzlement, like a city apartment dweller who has been presented with an English sheepdog for a house pet.

With a courtesy due to his vice-president, McKechnie lets Babe write his own training ticket, which is as energetic as that of a rural traffic cop on a quiet corner.

If the Babe elects to go golfing instead of standing duty, McKechnie flickers no eyelash and fills the hole in the practice session with the placid concentration of a checker player capping a king.

Nonetheless, Bill is worried about Ruth, who is a "must" in the Braves' lineup and whose paunchy stomach and brittle legs do not fit the needs of his outfield.

He watched the big man waddle after a low line drive in the first Yankee game and go sprawling in a humpty-dumpty dive while the ball rolled away for three bases and two runs, and his mind must have pictured the wide open acres at Braves Field and the clatter of rival hoofs.

* * *

Babe Sees His Substitute

AS THE SEASON LOOMS the Babe, after spending his early energy, will be little more than a gaudy decoration to the Braves. The glamour of his personality will bring, only temporarily, hordes of fans trooping to see what, sadly, is now only the husk of his former greatness.

It was a mournful sight to watch the aging master matched, in these early Yankee exhibitions, against the lithe, lean, eager lad (Selkirk), who has filled his post on the New York club, and who went scampering after hard-hit drives to fetch them with a flourish where ancient Babe would have lumbered and waved as they passed or fell short.

There, once, as Selkirk now ran, the Babe had run before him, performing prodigies of valor, like reaching in among the foliage of a lady customer's hat to snatch a fly ball one-handed and drawing a full-throated roar from his worshippers.

It was a sight that the Waterfront Park fans who had passed beyond the age of 41—and nine out of every ten in St. Pete are over 60—to brooding on the swift, inexorable advance of their own years, the twinges of their infirmities, the ephemerality of youth and bowed down their hearts with such a weight of woe that less than 800 of the 5000 folk who watched the first game came the next day to watch the second.

* * *

Performs Against His Will

I SUSPECT THAT RUTH, having been coerced in playing beyond his physical limit by the promise of a manager's job, is doing his training chores with the absent spirit that a love-lorn housemaid dusts the family furniture.

He had hoped this year to go to the ball yard as a passenger, not as a member of the crew, and to park his baseball weary frame on a bench or in the coaching box as manager.

He had intended, he told me last autumn in Detroit, to quit while he was still Babe to one and all, and not much less than first in the hearts of his countrymen.

He wanted his public to think of him in the full glory of his stimulating color and flavor, because, he said, he knew that people would only hollor Hero while a man was still fresh, and he felt himself growing historic.

So now, after watching the swollen ghost of Babe's past greatness clanking and creaking in the Braves' outfield, I question whether it would not have been more generous to have pensioned him off and allowed him to drift into that favorite figure of speech, the swirling mists of time, or to have let him become immortalized in the 15-cent paper-back baseball libraries which he has crowded with his own statistics.

COLLINS Sees Yawkey, CRONIN

RED SOX MEET GIANTS TODAY

By Joe Cashman

Sarasota, Fla., March 20—Marse Tom Yawkey and E. Trowbridge Collins came in with the sun this morning for their first eyeful of their Red Sox under the command of Joe Cronin, whom they've labeled the most expensive bit of baseball bric-a-brac ever by investing a cool $400,000 in him.

Tom and Eddie won't be kept waiting long for a look. The Fenway flock will line up for inspection this very afternoon against the Giants.

And what the millionaire boy owner and his baseball business manager see should satisfy them even if they're as critical as the fortune they've spent for a winner entitles them to be.

The most inexperienced observer can note a great improvement over last season in the club. It's considerably stronger in most departments and weaker in none

An infield that was second-rate now has class written all over it with Cronin and Babe Dahlgren teaming with Max Bishop, never lighter or faster, and Billy Werber, the cream of the third base crop.

"Lefty" Grove, Henry Johnson and George Pipgras at this early date are pitching better than at any time in '34.

There's every indication that all three will be able to work in turn with Wes Ferrell, Ostermueller, Welch, Rhodes and Walberg, Hockette, Merena and Wilson add strength to the staff

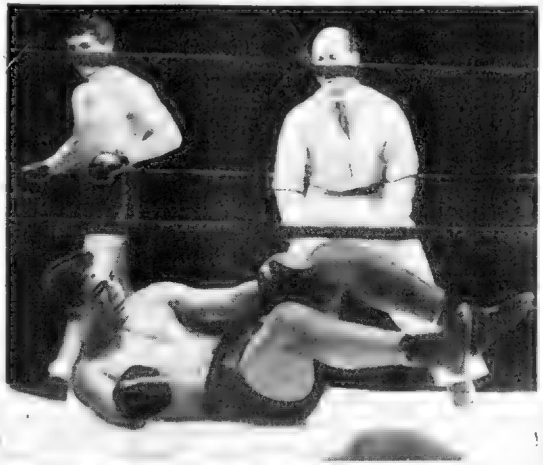
ROUT CARDS

In the outfield Roy Johnson is the same brilliant all-around performer, Solters and Cooke never looked better, Reynolds is living up to his rating as the mightiest of spring hitters, while Almada and Graham are making determined bids to stick

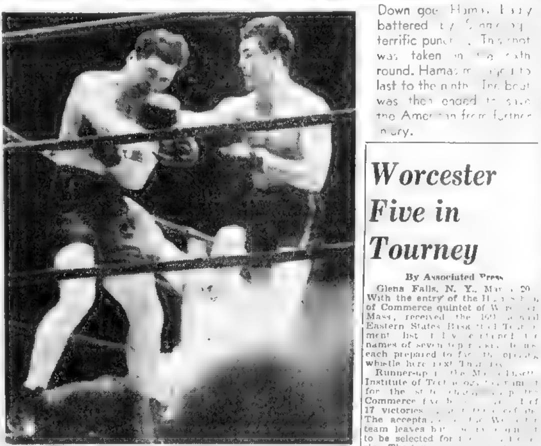
Rick Ferrell continues to furnish the best catching in the league.

In every start, the team looks better. Ragged in its opening games on the East Coast, it whitewashed the A's on its return home and strolled down to Bradenton to slaughter the world champion Cardinals, 14 to 1, with Ferrell and Ostermueller baffling the Red birds and all their mates hitting like demons

Maxie's Right Rings Gong on Hamas



Down goes Hamas, badly battered by Schmeling's terrific punch. This shot was taken in the sixth round. Hamas managed to last to the ninth. The bout was then ended to save the American from further injury.



STEVE HAMAS MAX SCHMELING

A right hook to Hamas' chin, delivered by Schmeling, takes its toll as this picture shows in the heavyweight battle at Hamburg, Germany. This sock was the deciding factor in the fray. Schmeling won on technical K. O. in the ninth.

Notre Dame Plunged in Gloom

South Bend, Ind., March 20 (AP)—Notre Dame University was plunged into gloom today with the death of Joseph Sullivan, captain-elect of the 1935 football team, brilliant athlete and campus leader.

Sullivan, who died in New York early today from mastoiditis, had been the object of prayers of his fellow students and faculty members since he was stricken with pneumonia in December

Only yesterday, a special novena for the husky left tackle's recovery, observed by the entire student body daily, ended with the feast of St. Joseph

One of the most popular men on the South Bend campus, Sullivan starred in track as well as on the gridiron. He put the shot for the Irish squad, and won his first football letter as substitute end for Eddie Kraus, all-American, in 1933

"Sullivan's place can not be filled," said Coach Elmer Layden. "We were depending on him to lead the 1935 team, and his loss to the squad is irreparable."

Tribute to Sullivan was paid last night by the Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, at the annual basketball banquet, terming the New York youth the "typical Notre Dame man," whose valiant fight for life had inspired his legion of followers

Sullivan, who prepped at St. John's in Brooklyn, was the son of Lieutenant Thomas E. Sullivan of the New York police department and continued a family athletic tradition. His father was wrestling champion of the New York police force.

BAM TO FACE DEAN TODAY

Points to Energy Displayed in Practice and to Golf to Prove He is Sound

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 20—"I'll show them whether I have a bum heart or not" thundered Babe Ruth today, when informed of a rumor circulating to the effect that he was about to quit baseball due to a serious heart attack.

Just who the "them" was Ruth didn't make clear, whether the instigators of the rumor, for whom he threatened "to make it hot if I ever catch them" or the world champion Cardinals who are in town for an exhibition contest with the Braves today.

The rumor completely [illegible] the Braves camp until Ruth, located at his home on the outskirts of the city, [illegible] and [illegible] denied the tale

"There's nothing wrong with me," he boomed. "I never felt better in years. If I ever get the guy that started that story I'll make him sorry for it."

In truth Ruth has [illegible] better [illegible] He [illegible] under the weight [illegible] carried for several springs.

He displays [illegible] energy in practice and in the exhibition games to date at Waterfront Park. On top of [illegible] he plays golf almost every day.

BAM VS. DEAN

In Sunday's game [illegible] the Bam legged it [illegible] home from second on a short [illegible] to left field, a feat he never attempted in [illegible] years with the Yankees.

At [illegible] he took a ball [illegible] and raced [illegible] the [illegible] preventing the batter from scoring.

[illegible] the evil rumor spread on the very eve of [illegible] widely [illegible] duel between Ruth and Dizzy Dean, the National League No. 1 and No. 2 [illegible]

Dean was tops in the older circuit until the Braves acquired the big Bam, an acquisition which Dean is said to have resented

Dizzy will do well to be careful today, for he will be facing a suddenly aroused and revengeful Ruth who will be striving to prove clearly the falsity of the rumor

New York University athletic officials today blasted the report that the N. Y. U. basketball team of this year would play the Malden City Club at the Arena on Monday night, as had been announced in Boston

The facts of the case, according to N. Y. U., are that a group of 1933-34 Violet varsity courtmen and one player who never attended the university, will meet the Malden City Club. This New York five goes under the name "Violets," hence the erroneous report.

Coast Bans Chi Clubs

Los Angeles, March 20 (US) Both Chicago ball clubs, the Cubs and the White Sox, were virtually ousted from their California spring training camps when David P. Fleming, president of the Los Angeles club, announced he had definitely closed the territorial rights of the Angels to all major league clubs for 1936.

The territorial rights of Los Angeles includes any site within 10 miles of the city limits. This automatically prohibits the White Sox from engaging in any form of baseball exhibition at Pasadena, Cal. The Sox can't even play a semi-pro club there at Brookside Park.

According to Fleming, the move was decided upon because of the willingness of both the Cubs and Sox to play ringed exhibition games in this territory long before there [illegible] clubs are [illegible] and ready to disport themselves as big leaguers.

SCRIBES Pick Bruins TO WIN

SPECIAL CARS FOR LOCALS

By Walter Kiley

Fireworks were conspicuous by their absence as the regular 1935 National Hockey League season passed into history.

Montreal Maroons twice overcame a Bruins' lead to pull out with a 4-2 victory at the Garden.

Toronto Maple Leafs [illegible] when [illegible] Chicago Blackhawks eased the [illegible] 4-2 win over Canadiens [illegible] games which had no [illegible] on the final standings.

Tommy Gorman left both Hooley Smith and Lawrence Northcott at home . . . Yet the Maroons had no great trouble in beating the Bruins . . . Boston seemingly showing the effect of its long hard siege of winning hockey . . . The boys trying hard but evidently just the least mite stale.

Tiny Thompson will have an [illegible] study as the playoff champion [illegible] Toronto Maple Leafs on Saturday [illegible] Jackson, of the Cubs has been [illegible] for the [illegible] B[illegible]

Benny Grant, now with Philadelphia, will replace Jackson for the Cubs' two games at Quebec on Friday and Sunday . . . And will then head for Toronto where he will join the Bruins, Jackson returning to the Cubs.

About 7,000 were in on the Garden [illegible] . . . As Bob [illegible] of the Maroons' second line [illegible] a [illegible] with a clean second period [illegible] from close to the blue line [illegible] third period [illegible] the [illegible] up [illegible]

What few tickets are left over will go on public sale starting at 10 o'clock Friday morning . . . Admission and standing room sale begins at 8 o'clock the night of each Boston game.

Two special cars have been reserved for the Bruins as they leave immediately after Tuesday's game for Toronto . . . Canadian hockey writers seven out of eight of them, favor the Leafs to beat the Bruins.

Most of them figuring that the Leafs' clever second and third lines will offset the Bruins' more powerful defense . . . Which means that they highly respect Eddie Shore and Babe Siebert.

On the other hand, Boston's writers lean toward the Bruins.

Alex Motter handled himself well as he filled in for the injured Paul Haynes . . . The crowd was generous in its applause for him . . . Haynes is now off his crutches . . . He walks with a cane and expects to get on skates by Friday.

Alex Connell, Maroon's goalie, stopped one of Motter's hard shots with his mouth . . . He was rendered hors de combat . . . Several cuts in the upper lip are a souvenir . . . He was unconscious for some few minutes . . . But resumed his goal tending.

Jack Harlow and Rae Crowther of the Harvard football staff took in their first Boston professional hockey game . . . Captain Bob [illegible] accompanied them . . . The Maroons open their second place playoffs against the Blackhawks at Montreal on Saturday . . .

Louis to Fight Carnera

—By Jack Conway—

NEW YORK, March 20—Just opinions:

Mr Boston

Mike Jacobs, former partner of Tex Rickard, who is now promoting boxing on his own: I have Joe Louis, colored heavyweight from Detroit, signed to battle Primo Carnera at one of the ball parks in July. I consider Louis the best puncher in the heavyweight division and believe he would knock Max Baer for a loop. I also have Barney Ross' agreement that he will defend his world's lightweight title against Lou Ambers in a ball park on June 5. This is a [illegible] match and will draw [illegible]. Later in the summer I shall send Ross against Jimmy McLarnin in a title for the welterweight championship. Carnera vs. Louis, Ross vs. Ambers and Ross vs. McLarnin look like three [illegible].

O'MAHONEY CARD

JACK Curley: Dan O'Mahoney drew three times as much money against Jim Browning as Jim Londos did in his last New York appearance. Wrestling fans are like fans in other sports. They like new faces. The young Irishman gives them their greatest thrill.

I am also enthusiastic about Chief Little Wolf. He looks like a great wrestler. He's a Navajo Indian and is going places.

* * *

TOOTS Mondt: I think Chief Little Wolf will beat out O'Mahoney in the race for a bout with Jim Londos. Wolf is the top card on the Coast and would draw $100,000 if pitted against Londos at Wrigley Field [illegible]

I always hop from Coast to Coast by plane. The trip takes only 1[illegible] hours and is as cheap as by rail.

CHARLEY [illegible]: The [illegible] are finally [illegible] for Brother Jim[illegible] [illegible] premiere bout [illegible] $11,000 and the Lasky-Braddock [illegible] at the Garden on Friday night should do almost as well. Carnera against the winner of Friday night's bout would be a sellout.

Jimmy has the Big Schmeling title go set for [illegible]. Why should he take chances by putting Schmeling into an [illegible] tourney? The German is the card as a result of his knockout of Hamas.

PAUL Bowser: George Zaharas is as tough as any man I have ever seen wrestle. He is also a master of the fine points of the mat game, and may be the challenger who will eventually lick Ed George.

* * *

RUDY Dusek: O'Mahoney keeps improving with each match. He punches harder than anybody in the wrestling game. I should know, as he split my mouth and [illegible] up with a right hand sock in our Boston bout.

* * *

DAN Koloff: Wrestling is going big in France. I am sailing for Paris on Saturday and will wrestle for Jeff Dickson. I would like to meet Henri Deglane for Jeff Dickson.

* * *

TOM Packs: I have Gus Sonnenberg, former Dartmouth football hero, signed to meet Ray Steele in a special bout on the Dan O'Mahoney-Rudy Dusek card in St. Louis on March 26.

* * *

JACK McGrath: O'Mahoney got a cauliflower ear in his bout with Jim Browning. I am having the injured ear treated, and I think the condition will clear up.

I'm going to show Danno in Worcester again when we get back home. Worcester, of course, is my home town. The capital of the world to Jack McGrath.

CARNERA SLOW

HARRY Lenney: Ray Impelletiere was licking Carnera up to the time of the knockout. Ray has had only six professional bouts, and with a bit more experience will chill Primo.

Who Wants to Coach B. C. Freshmen?

Boston College needs a new freshman baseball coach to replace Dinney McNamara, newly chosen football head coach.

Dinny was originally signed this year to be assistant to McKenney in football and head coach of freshman baseball, but his new job, which will demand his taking charge of spring football practice, makes it impossible for him to hold both posts.

The [illegible] will be called out soon, and the need of a new coach is urged.

The graduate board on athletics is expected to meet and decide this and a few other problems some time next year.

SKATE FRIDAY AT ARENA

By Bill Connell

Five European ice artists arrived in Boston this morning for the World's Fair skating carnival at the Arena Friday and Saturday nights.

The five, Maxie Herber and Ernst Baier of Germany, Ilse Pipez and Karl Zwack of Vienna, and Vivi Ann Hulten of Sweden are making Boston their first stop in a triumphal skating tour.

The whirl on this continent started in New York a week ago when more than 17,000 fans were turned away from the Madison Square Garden sellout.

In Ottawa, whence the five came today, another great reception was accorded them. The Fair at the Arena seems due to be a two-day sellout.

Following a brief rest today the five worked out at the Arena to put finishing touches on their special numbers for the Fair.

Miss Herber is one of the most

STOLE SHOW

Years of practice made her an accomplished figure skater before she was in her teens, and two years back she made her first "big time" appearance in the great Berlin [illegible] festival.

That was her first major chance. She stole the show from the headlined skaters, and since then has been a spotlighted [illegible] figure. Her improvement was remarkable and [illegible] year she took the world's [illegible] skating championship of [illegible].

Her performance in New York last week made her the darling of [illegible] fans at the Garden. She is expected to win the hearts and [illegible] of many more thousands Friday and Saturday on the Arena [illegible].

Final costume, scenic and skating preparations were underway today for the carnival. The many American ice stars, foreign performers, and elaborate staging make the Fair a most colorful ice fete.

DUSEK 5-4 Choice OVER RUSSELL

Rudy Dusek will step into the Arena ring tonight a 5-4 favorite over Rebel Bob Russell in the main bout of Alex MacLean's wrestling show but he may be escorted out on a stretcher if Russell carries out his threats.

Rudy Dusek

The riot-out Rebel, with three main bouts at the Arena and a series of matches on the coast depending on victory tonight, says he'll crush the most sinister of the Dusek brothers in straight falls.

A win will put Russell in line for a small fortune.

The most thunderous tangle of the season is due when these cavemen start swapping kicks, punches, gouges, strangles and all other torturous tactics.

Charlie Donnell, it is expected, will be in the middle of it all, the only referee in this section willing to handle the bout.

News Tip on River Blast Awarded $25 Prize

By the News Tip Editor

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President, was rowing with a Harvard crew in the Charles River. There was an explosion on a launch following the crew.

Daniel Brady, of North Beacon street, Brighton, saw the explosion and realized what might have happened if the launch had been a bit closer to the President's son. Brady called the News Tip Editor of the Boston Evening American.

And for that call, Brady today is $25 richer. He won the first prize in this week's news tips award.

That's how easy it is to earn an extra $25. All you have to do is to call Liberty 4000 when you see an unusual story and ask for the News Tip Editor.

The second prize of $10 this week went to Harry Edwards, Boston Market terminal of the New Haven Railroad, for a tip on a [illegible] in South Boston.

"Chased by the Devil"

New Englander Tells of Eerie Events in Ever-Fair Killarney

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

And the top o' the mornin' to you, Patrick Williams of Kitwell Farm, Fairfield, Conn., for your swell story today of how the hills of Killarney were made

Let's be after drawin' up our chairs to the fire and hear how Pat nearly got himself turned into a hill!

FLOYD GIBBONS

"It was all my Uncle Tim's fault," Pat writes. "I was only eight at the time and his stories made a terrific impression on all of us kids.

I realize now that Uncle Tim must have kissed the Blarney Stone many times but when he told me the story of the origin of the Hills of Killarney my eyes almost popped out of my head."

"You see," Pat continues, "when a farmer in Killarney wouldn't leave a little milk and a handful of grain out for the 'good little people' this would displease the 'Old Boy' (the devil) and he would suddenly plop a basket over your head—enclosing the stingy farmer—and there would be a new hill."

Well, sir, this story was running through Pat's little head one cold night when the gas in his home had frozen up. His mother had put candles in [illegible] for light.

The candle light threw eerie shadows on the walls and little Pat could see the Old Boy himself just waiting for him

And then Pat says his father told him to go out to the wood shed and get a basket of wood for the fireplace

Pat took a bushel basket with him and hiding his fears as well as he could, stepped out into the darkness of the back yard

He says he was whistling a tune to keep up his spirits but his knees were quaking. He didn't waste much time getting to the woodshed and he piled his basket high with wood so that he wouldn't have to make a second trip.

"I remember wondering," Pat writes, "why the pigeons in their cote, just over the door, were fluttering about.

"I thought maybe they saw the Old Boy and were frightened. A chill came over me and, forgetting my extra heavy basket, I tried to hurry and as I reached the door I stumbled and without a bit of warning I suddenly received a terrific blow over the back of the head."

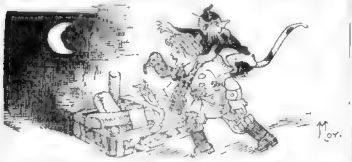
Pat says the blow was a hard one but he was more frightened than hurt and he screamed and fell against the door in terror

A blood-curdling scream from over his head answered him and before he knew it a heavy soft cloak was dropped over his head. The cloak, Pat says, seemed to be alive and clawed at him as it tried to envelope him!

"It's the Old Boy himself," Pat thought, "trying to get his basket over my head."

Pat held on to his own basket during all the excitement but most of the wood was scattered far and wide. He fought his way carefully out of the woodshed and little by little crossed the yard

It was hard to see with that black cloak holding on to his head but he could see a little light from a candle in the kitchen window and made for that point Then he managed to look behind him and what he saw made him dumb with terror.



The Old Boy himself was keeping step with him—horrible basket in hand ready to plop it over his head!

Well, sir, Pat says, he tried his best to scream but only hoarse croaks came out of his mouth

He had visions of [illegible] being turned into a hill right in his own back yard and he wondered what his father and mother would say when they saw [illegible] in the morning

At last, Pat says, [illegible] and as he did the horrible cloak seemed to be snatched from his head and he staggered into the house [illegible]

He was hysterical when he reached the front room and he babbled out the whole of Uncle Tim's story of the Hills of Killarney and how he had [illegible] Old Boy who wanted to make a new hill out of him

But Pat's father and [illegible] laugh because, you see, Pat's face was [illegible] scratches and there was a big bump on the back of his head where the Old Boy had hit him with a club.

Pat says he remembers hearing his father say something about "That old fool Tim," and then all went to bed to dream it all over again.

And now, boys and girls, while Pat sleeps let's go out to his back yard and like Sherlock Holmes reconstruct the crime

You see, Doctor Watson, when Pat entered the woodshed the O'Tooles' cat—the O'Tooles' [illegible]—was trying to steal a dove from the cote over the door

When Pat started to leave the shed he stepped on the business end of a rake and the handle flew up and hit him in the back of the head.

That accounts for the bump on his head

Then when he fell against the shed door he displaced Kitty and the dishonest cat, herself frightened to death—fell on Pat's head and tried to defend herself from an imagined attack.

That accounts for the scratches and the blood.

And finally, what Pat took for the Old Boy himself—keeping step with him—was nothing but his own shadow carrying his own basket shadow and thrown on the snow behind him by the candle in the window!

Thanks Pat, old boy—I mean old man—for a dandy story and I'm glad they didn't turn you into a hill that night because we never would have heard your story!

And remember, boys and girls, of the Adventurers' Club. You don't have to be turned into a hill to win one of these checks I am passing out every day.

All you have to do is send in your true adventure and leave the rest to Uncle Floyd.

I'll be up to your house again tomorrow with another thriller.

It's a red-hot yarn by Lemuel B. Bridges of 123 Pearl street, Somerville. The title is "When Brakes Won't Hold."

Without asking Miss Claire's permission I am [illegible] on behalf of the Drama Critics League of America [illegible]

Kathleen Burke Given Role

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 20—I have never thought that Paramount made the most of Kathleen Burke, who impressed me in just a "bit" she played in "Bull Dog Drummond Strikes Back," with Ronald Colman. She is an exotic type, but she doesn't depend entirely upon her flashing dark eyes and masses of dark hair for her appeal. She can act.

Gouverneur Morris, who is on [illegible] contract to Paramount, saw Miss Burke on the [illegible] and has decided upon her for the [illegible] in his [illegible] of the [illegible] story [illegible] to be [illegible] short. Miss Burke was the original panther woman for Paramount.

First Performance

The first performance in this country of the suite from Alban Berg's new opera, "Lulu," will be the feature of the Friday afternoon and Saturday evening concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Berg is world famous for his opera "Wozzeck," which he based upon the immortal drama by Büchner. The composer has been called the foremost pupil of Arnold Schonberg, whose influence is clearly marked in his works.

Josef Hofmann

Radio Questions and Answers

Q—Where can Eddie Cantor, Fred Allen and Phil Baker be addressed?
J. S., of Medford.

A—It is always safest to address air artists in care of the station to which you are listening when they broadcast. Mail is forwarded regularly.

Q—Is that really the nephew of Beatrice Lillie, meaning the young chap who is called "Junior" on her broadcast? How old is he?
Auntie, of Ashmont.

A—No, he is a boy named Michael James O'Day, and just turning 10 years old.

Q—Who is the young lady who plays "Camella" in the "Caravan" program? Does she have that name as an ad for the cigarette?
Curious, of Chelsea.

A—She is Alice Frost and it would seem as though that's why she bears the name.

Q—Wrote in previously about announcer Bill O'Connell of the Yankee Network—how old is he? Married? Where from?
D. T., of Boston.

A—Bill is 23 years old, single and from the old town of Boston.

Q—Can you give the names of the singers in the Yankee Mixed Quartet that is featured through WNAC waves? Also is Bradley Kincaid off the air?
MRS. E. H. K., of Old Orchard.

A—They are Virginia Warren, Mabel Pierson, Walter Kidder and George Wheeler. Kincaid does not have a regular schedule at present, but will return shortly.

Q—What has happened to the other Jimmy Allen and when is he coming back?
A. A., of Providence.

A—Please advise who the first Jimmy Allen might be.

Q—Is David Ross, the "mike" man, elderly or youthful?
Aged, of Hyde Park.

A—One might call Ross middle-aged, although others would say young—he is 37 years old.

Such is the man who is casting his shadow over our nation. His career is apt to affect every man, woman and child in the country. ALLEN
Celebrates Air BIRTHDAY

By N. F. T.

More fun than a barrel of monkeys is the way Fred Allen makes ready to stage his radio "Town Hall Tonight" turn (WEEI) between 9 and 10 o'clock this evening. It's the first anniversary of the well known weekly hour.

• • •

Fred will preside, cut himself a piece of cake, and otherwise conduct himself in keeping with the spirit of high revelry due to prevail. He will revive two of the most popular sketches for which the "Mighty Allen Art Players" have come to be so popular among loud-speaker patrons from coast to coast.

"N. F. T."

Amateur artists continue to hold forth, with a very special group of "super" amateurs slated to perform tonight in honor of the comedian's network anniversary.

• • •

Old German, Irish and Scotch love songs, arranged for John McCormack, will be sung by the famous Irish tenor (WBZ) this evening during the program at 9:30 p. m.

Accompanied by an orchestra conducted by William Daly, McCormack will sing first the German song "Minnelied," followed by the Irish tune "Down by the Sally Gardens," "After," by Sir Edward Elgar, Squire's "Give Me Today," "A Necklace of Love" by Nevin, "Sing to Me the Auld Scotch Songs" and "Rise, Dawn of Love" by Campton.

• • •

James Hilton's radio adaptation of his famous novel, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," will be heard for the first time in this country (WBZ) tonight at 10:30 p. m.

The dramatization, presented successfully by NBC, covers the life of an English schoolmaster, from his experiences in his first classroom to his death as a very old man.

Mary Pickford will present "Smilin' Through" as the 25th program in her dramatic series, broadcast this evening (WEEI) on the stroke of 8 p. m.

Gracie Allen, having helped to hinder George Burns file his income tax, believes it is high time to take the financial situation of the country in hand.

She has accordingly evolved a new and radical refinancing plan, which she will attempt to outline during the Burns and Allen broadcast (WNAC) tonight, from 9:30 to 10 p. m.

HANEY

Discusses Monetary Policy

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, March 20—Last week brought no change in the trend of business activity. Since about the middle of February the trend has been distinctly downward.

Freight traffic is off. Industrial production in the heavy industries, "such as steel and lumber" is off. Wholesale prices are off.

This general trend is likely to continue at least until the government begins to scatter currency around more freely. By stepping up its distributions of doles, relief payments, etc., the administration can make things look better for a while.

As long as the new dealers insist on restricting business by their "reforms" and monetary manipulation, the only way we can get increased employment is to have the government do the employing.

So, you see, the whole thing comes to a head in government spending. The big question, therefore, is, what can the government use for money? Where is it to get the funds to distribute?

Business men earn money by employing labor and capital in productive ways. They direct production into the manufacture of goods which can be sold to willing buyers.

But how does the government get its funds?

First, there are taxes. These, however, are at the limit. The politicians don't dare to put on much more.

Second, some say, "just print notes." They say that the government can substitute greenbacks for its bonds.

The immediate effect would be to crack the market for government bonds wide open. No bond holder will take greenback notes for an interest-bearing bond, and there would be a rush to get rid of bonds that would wreck all banks, and ruin the government's credit.

A terrible currency inflation would follow and end in the disaster which overtook Germany.

Third, some say:

"Well, let the government borrow a few billions more—what are the banks for?"

Here is the way that works.

The banks are already so loaded up with government bonds that they will not take any more except under compulsion.

So it is proposed to have the government take control of the banks. The Federal Reserve Banks are now completely controlled. The banking bill would make practically all banks subject to the reserve banks.

Thus, when the government would "borrow" from banks, it would be borrowing from itself! The Federal Reserve notes which it would spend would do no better than its own greenback notes.

What would be the difference?

The banks are the chief bondholders. The government is forcing them to take its promises to pay at almost zero interest, and to issue notes on these bonds. This is getting close to camouflaged greenbacks.

You can understand this. You must. You must stop it, or we will all be ruined.

A bond is government debt (our debt).

It is put in a bank and called an investment "asset."

Then the bank issues its "notes," backed by the government's debt!

Or the government arranges to have its controlled reserve banks enter an item on their books called a "deposit." This is also government debt (our debt).

The government then draws checks on this "deposit" credit.

The farmers, or others, who get the checks, deposit them in some bank, which is said to increase bank "deposits."

The banks then send the checks into the Reserve banks. The Reserve banks now receive the checks as "deposits" of the member banks.

Despite the banking terms, you can understand this. You can see that it is bad business. It is downright juggling. The whole thing is government debt (our debt).

There is no way to stop this shell game, except to stop government spending. And there is no way to stop government spending except to let business men and workers make real money by really productive work.

If the New Deal goes on, inflation is inevitable. Since our currency is all credit, credit inflation is currency inflation.

1935 EARNINGS
Of Superpower

The American Superpower Corporation reports for period Jan. 1, 1935 to Mar. 7, 1935, net income after all charges of $72,611.

President Thorne states that since the first of the year the corporation has acquired 13,644 shares of its first preferred stock.

Balance sheet of Mar. 7, 1935, shows net assets of $23,922,760 available for the first preferred stock, equivalent to approximately $93.50 a share.

National Steel Corp. is now going ahead actively with its plans for the new strip mill, which had been discussed for some time, to be built at the plant of the great Lakes Steel Corp. at Ecorse, Detroit.

UTILITIES HARD HIT BY TAXES

REQUIRE TWO-THIRDS OF NET

By B. C. FORBES

Nearly every corporation head is telling stockholders in annual reports how taxes are eating up profits.

Utility companies are among the hardest hit of all. Gains in gross income are almost universal; but higher costs, especially taxes, have brought net under the previous year in most cases.

B. C. Forbes

Tax-leviers continue to gobble up more and more each year regardless of the ability of victims to pay.

More than two-thirds of the net income of power companies is now required to meet taxes—an appalling commentary on how the nation's lifeblood is being dried up.

Ponder this table covering electric light and power companies:

Year	Gross revs.	Taxes	Percentage
1929	$2,072,923,000	$188,032,000	9.07
1930	2,143,760,000	204,023,000	9.52
1931	2,130,097,000	211,991,000	9.95
1932	1,979,990,000	217,000,000	10.96
1933	1,917,800,000	250,000,000	13.03
1934*	1,970,000,000	270,000,000	15.06

*Estimated.

Our railroads are today paying in taxes almost 1½ times as much as the total cost of operating the federal government in 1876 and almost half of the government's aggregate expenditures at the opening of this century.

Their tax bill has sky-rocketed to $658,000 a day, almost $250,000,000 a year.

Is it extraordinary that few of them are paying any common stock dividends?

Washington shows little consideration for its customers, taxpayers.

My Washington correspondent sends me these news items:

It will cost American Telephone from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 merely to supply the Federal Communications Commission with information "asked for by a group of last year's graduate from Harvard Law School."

An attorney travelled more than 1500 miles to appear before a department, remained in Washington 10 days, left when informed by the cabinet officer in charge that matters had been satisfactorily adjusted and that a formal departmental ruling would promptly be published.

Four weeks passed. No ruling. Finally, the decision was published—on every point precisely the reverse of what the cabinet officer had indicated. "This formula," he adds, "now is well known as the 'get 'em out of town and soak 'em system.'"

Wendell L. Willkie, utility spokesman, told the House interstate commerce committtee that during the last two years utility men have had no time for business recovery, that every energy had been devoted to defending their properties against a campaign of defamation sponsored and financed by the government.

Republic Steel spent approximately $100,000 extra in its merger negotiations for the express purpose of arranging every detail exactly in accordance with demands of the Federal Trade Commission and the Securities Exchange Commission.

These special precautions delayed the merger three months.

Yet ten days after the public announcement of the laboriously prepared plans, the Department of Justice initiated obstructive proceedings—on the very points so carefully attended to. He comments: "Trying to do business with the New Deal is like trying to sleep with a half-a-dozen potched eggs."

Cheerful: One automobile company is in the happy position of not being able to fulfill orders, even though it produced almost 11,000 cars last month, Pontiac.

CURB Prices Hold STEADY

By Associated Press

New York, March 20—The curb market moved slowly in the early trading today with price showing no marked variations from the previous day's final level. A scattering of utilities, alcohols and industrial specialties registered small improvement.

Gains ranging up to around ½ point occurred in Electric Bond & Share, Swift & Company, International Petroleum, Hiram Walker and Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

Most of the wider changes were upward, but they were confined to inactively traded specialties like A. O. Smith Corporation, up 1 at 54½, and New York & Honduras Rosario Mining, also a point higher at 39.

PLATE GLASS Output Highest

Pittsburgh—Total production of polished plate glass by member companies of Plate Glass Manufacturers of America for February was 13,723,151 square feet, against 13,365,188 in January and 7,441,278 in February, 1934.

February, 1935, output was the highest since October, 1929, when 14,620,904 square feet were produced.

All bidders shall be required to file with their bids a properly executed certificate of workmen's compensation insurance issued by a company satisfactory to the State Commissioner of Insurance.

Plans, specifications and contract forms may be obtained at Room 167, State House, Boston, upon deposit of the amount of $75. RECOVERY Forces STILL AT Work

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

An astute follower of financial affairs sums up the present outlook for us as discouraging but not hopeless. A period of hesitation but not retrogression seems ahead.

As James R. Bancroft writes in the current bulletin of the American Institute of Finance, the current situation is not conducive to an extended market advance. But, he immediately adds, we are in the fifth year of the depression and inexorable and fundamental forces for recovery are in action. These will, in time, overcome political hindrances. It will be well to temper intermediate spells of pessimism with caution.

The fact margin rules are designated under the Securities Act are not only hard to understand, but difficult to apply is hardly a secret. But so far no one has stood up and said in a manner calculated to stir up the opposition needed to bring about a change. Charles H. Meyer, New York lawyer and authority on exchange legislation, promises to supply the necessary leadership. He suggests a single standard for margins. Between 50 and 75 per cent is a logical figure, says Mr. Meyer, as this is about the average permitted on all listed stocks under present regulations. Brokers would do well to push the idea along.

Chas. H. Meyer

Notebook: Follow the earnings trend is an old, tried and trusted axiom of the financial district . . . It is an important signpost along the road to successful market operations . . . Through the courtesy of the United Business Service of Boston we print a list of a few industries whose earnings trend is up . . . Advertising, printing and publishing; auto accessories; building supplies; can manufacturers; coal mining; credit companies; department stores; drug chains; mail order houses; office equipment; petroleum and rubber and tires.

The market literally flits up and away from the zone in which we want to do our buying for a turn. Prices will not be followed higher even to the extent of passing up the rally. The reason is that taking on shares for a technical rally while prices are starting up is regarded as too risky by this writer. We will wait a return to the levels noted. Failing this, a half-hearted reaction after the rally will encourage us to buy for something more impressive than a technical turn.

Shorts: The idea is spreading that the holding company bill will never pass in its present form . . . Good solid accumulation seems to be present in some directions in the utility group . . . Public opinion is swinging slowly but surely in the favor of power and light companies . . . Pretty soon the politicians are going to have to answer the question of whether a reduction in rates is as important as a reduction in taxes . . . And also whether this rate cut and control talk is a smoke screen to keep thoughts away from taxes.

STOCK Prices Off AT CLOSE

TOBACCOS ARE FEATURE

New York, March 20—A sudden break in the tobacco shares unsettled the stock market near the close today.

Losses in the tobacco group ran to more than 3 points with Liggett & Myers B. in the van of the decline. American Tobacco B. Reynolds Tobacco B. and Lorillard also were hard hit in the selling.

The selling was quickly extended to other sections of the list, particularly the rails.

Southern Pacific, New York Central, Atchison, Delaware & Hudson and Union Pacific lost their early gains and in some instances had them converted into moderate losses.

Utility shares which had been outstandingly firm earlier also were effected by the late downturn.

Timely News

Bright spots on the Wall Street ledger as markets opened were:

The somewhat better than seasonal output of electric power for the week ended March 16. The Edison Electric Institute said the gain over 1934 of 4.7 per cent compared with the preceding week's advantage of precisely the same margin.

The net profit of Montgomery Ward for 1934 of $1.72 a share compared with 18 cents the year before.

President Avery's report that the highly competitive price situation indicates lower profits for the current half-year tended to temper enthusiasm, however.

A cloudy spot in market calculations was:

The doubt expressed by Iron Age over the causes for the decline in its scrap steel index from $11.17 a ton to $10.83—either "actual reduction in consumption" or "growing conservatism of buyers"—were ideas advanced.

The pound sterling opened at $4.79, a rise of ⅛ cent. The French franc was .00⅛ of a cent lower at 6.59 cents.

RAIL Expenditures ARE HIGHER

New York—Gross capital expenditures by class I railroads of this country in 1934 were greater than in any year since 1931, according to the Association of American Railroads.

The total for railway equipment and roadway and structures totaled $212,712,000, against $103,947,000 in 1933 and $167,194,000 in 1932.

Gross capital expenditures for locomotives, freight and passenger train cars and other equipment were greater in 1934 at $92,005,000 than for any like period since 1930.

BOSTON Stocks Are FIRM

Stocks turned firm in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. Trading was at a slow pace.

Price changes were small for the most part.

Chicago Junction preferred showed a gain of 1½ at 110. Boston & Maine prior preferred also advanced, being up ¾ at 13.

Hathaway preferred dropped 5, selling at 20.

Rayburn Utilities Bill Would Wreck Twelve Billion Dollar Industry—For What?

THE President's message to Congress, on the regulation of public utility holding companies, suffers by comparison with the report of the National Power Policy Committee which he at the same time transmitted.

The latter, in recommending Federal legislation on this subject, proceeds with becoming sobriety, in strong contrast with the President's tone, to add that "such legislation should eradicate disclosed abuses, prevent the use of the holding company to obstruct State regulation of operating companies and make possible the elimination of the holding company where it serves no useful and necessary purpose, WITHOUT DISLOCATION OF INVESTMENT OR THE LOSS OF OPERATING ECONOMY."

• • •

THAT there have been glaring abuses in the utility business which have centered largely around the holding companies is now known of all men.

The Hearst newspapers were the first to uncover these abuses, and the most unsparing in their denunciation.

They must be eliminated. Their recurrence cannot be tolerated.

But in view of all that American industry has suffered from needless and destructive assault by New Deal theorists, the sapping of the vitality of business and the decline in its recuperative energy, we think it is time to approach even the high duty of "reform" with some regard to the patient's survival.

Let us turn from the vindictive and rather empty generalizations of the President's message—we cannot believe he wrote it, it is so unlike him—and take a look at the Rayburn Bill, which is the subject of the message.

THE BILL IS AN ATROCITY.

It takes the control and management of privately owned properties out of the hands of their owners and puts them in the hands of Governmental departments.

It takes all the effective regulatory authority away from the States and vests it in Federal Commissions.

It deprives the owners of these properties of all authority, initiative and independence in handling their own properties.

It reaches into the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts and seeks to usurp their power, DEPRIVING THEM OF THE RIGHT TO REVIEW THE MERE EDICTS of loosely constituted and political Commissions.

These Federal Commissions are clothed with complete power of management, but without any managerial responsibility.

It sets up a nationalized system of Government ownership without bothering with the formality of acquiring ownership, and with no regard to the injustice of destroying honestly created, honestly acquired and honestly owned private property.

Claiming to exempt the operating companies from the effects of this violent assumption of ownership and control, it ignores the fact that the bonds of the affected operating companies, as well as their preferred stocks and other securities, would never be able to maintain their values.

• • •

THERE would result a demoralization of the entire electrical industry, which would be unable to obtain funds for maintenance or extensions; an extension of Federal bureaucratic control to an extent that the people of the United States have never sanctioned nor envisaged, and an APPALLING ENLARGEMENT OF THE FEDERAL BUREAUCRACY AND PAYROLL.

It would be the most significant step the United States could take toward the eventual socialization of all its industries.

And why this ill-timed and high-tensioned slam at a great industry which despite its abuses is one of the great achievements of our generation?

• • •

IT IS a business that spends, under normal conditions, two billion dollars a year in wages and the purchase of material; employs one million people, furnishing support for many times that number; and has already, in the period of the slump voluntarily expended a billion dollars on new construction in an effort to arrest the depression.

It represents twelve billions of dollars contributed by ten million small investors, who have thus made possible a vital public service, unexcelled in the world, to over one hundred millions of our people.

Let there be regulation—Government control if need be. If we cannot regulate efficiently, we cannot operate efficiently.

The discovery of a localized abuse, however should not be the signal for industrial suicide and the massacre of useful capital.

There is a rising public resentment, as B. C. Forbes warns in a recent article, against these constant "anti" activities in Washington. The people, he maintains, want results and not everlasting recriminatory and punitive exertions on the part of the Administration.

"Unless the Administration," says he, "can so co-operate with business and industry as to bring about better conditions and more employment, no amount of denunciation and no multiplicity of 'reforms' will much longer satisfy."

Another eminent economist, Professor Lewis Haney, of New York University, writing in the New York Journal, says of this newest onslaught of the New Deal upon business:

"What a mockery it is to overthrow the powers of the State, destroy private property without compensation, and assail the pleas of helpless investors and employes as 'propaganda'—all in the name of 'traditional American independence.'"

Such utterances reflect the unmistakable temper of our people. Let the Administration make no mistake about it!

• • •

THE people want to conserve and build, not tear down and destroy.

They want recovery, not an endless chain of bootless vindictive reprisals—for the past.

They have no sympathy with the processes of destruction, whatever guise they wear, or the mutilation of a great American industry, to gratify the obsessions of theorists and visionaries.

Their goal is recovery; employment for the unemployed, sustaining and real work, not made-work; self-support—and not everlasting relief and the absorption of endless losses suffered at the hands of the Government.

The people are tired of "reform" fizzles like the NRA, well described as the National Retardation Act.

They don't want another fiasco—another pile of wreckage—even if it is called "holding company reform."

The War Debt Ghost

It Walks in Europe

A CLEAR conscience is a valuable asset when a man starts talking about other people's morals.

It is about the same with nations as it is with individuals.

A few days ago you read about the British "White Paper." That was the British Cabinet's announcement of a new and enormous armament program. A few days later came the French Government's action in doubling its army.

Then Dictator Hitler threw aside the last shred of secrecy and revealed Germany re-arming and re-creating the old bone-crushing military machine, this time a half-million strong.

The world saw the Treaty of Versailles, which was to have kept German people crushed and powerless, torn and trampled under the iron heel of German militarism.

NOW you see Old World governments close to panic. Old World diplomacy, with its secret schemes and plottings, is shocked and angry. You see nations of the Old World feverishly preparing for another and more dreadful war.

You see England, France and Italy, nations most seriously threatened and most vitally concerned, crying to high heaven about the "sanctity of treaties" and preparing to protest to the League of Nations against Hitler's open repudiation of the treaty that came out of a war that was "to end wars," and "make the world safe for democracy."

What can the League of Nations do? What can England, France, Italy and other threatened nations do to win world-support for their protest, when all Hitler has to do is ask "Is it worse to repudiate an unjust treaty or to dishonor promises to pay thousands of millions of dollars borrowed from the United States to crush Germany?"

What can welching governments and the tricksters of diplomatcy say to that? Is is hard to see. Those who smirked and called the United States of America "Uncle Shylock" because, having won the war for the Allies, we asked for return, NOT OF THE TREASURE WE SPENT, BUT ONLY OF THE MONEY WE LENT, they are not smirking now.

Those repudiated war debts have come back to plague them.

Attract Presidents

President Roosevelt announces his intention of visiting Gray Gables at Buzzards Bay in August.

Grover Cleveland made Gray Gables famous by stopping there when he was President.

Like Franklin D. Roosevelt, Grover Cleveland was a devotee of fishing.

In company with old Cape Codders, Cleveland used to fish not only in the briny waters of Buzzards Bay but also in the fresh water ponds nearby.

Authors, poets and artists all obtain inspiration along Cape Cod.

If they can do it, why not a President?

"Museum of Change"

A committee of the Arkansas Legislature has been investigating the alleged Red activities of Commonwealth College, at Mena.

In the "Museum of Social Change," dedicated "to record the fall of capitalism," they found on exhibition ropes used in lynching and "lingerie that have been discarded by the once-rich."

It is this sort of poison that is being syringed into the impressionable minds of students by some of our treasonable professors.

As Commonwealth College itself is a product of capitalism, it might not be amiss for the college authorities to put themselves on exhibition in this "museum."

New York Day by Day -:- -:- By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 20—Sentimental yearners for vaudeville who have wondered over the fate of the artists should take a scoot around Europe music halls. The majority of standard acts are now playing a briefer circuit that includes Paris, Rome, Amsterdam, Berlin and occasionally Constantinople.

O. O. McIntyre

Joe Jackson, the tramp bicyclist, has been packing them in at a Berlin variety house for many weeks with his familiar audience-shushing routine. He is billed as: Der meisterkipierte Komiker der Welt. On the same bill are the Knife Throwing Gibsons and The Three Diamonds. Remember?

Europe faced the fate of America in vaudeville doldrums. It was weary of the same faces, same acts. Thus the influx of Yankee vaudevillians has given it a fresh lease of life. Audiences delight in The Stepping Boys, the trained gorilla and tumblers who finish in a whirr of cartwheels.

American "piff-awmers" are not so highly paid as in the States, but they have the thrill of new scenes, new hotels and old time audience fervor. In every city they have their old Palace corner to strut their stuff. "In Rome did we lay 'em in the aisle! And, O boy, in Moscow!"

Speaking of vaudeville, Hamish McLaurin, whose varied talents once included vaudeville sketch writing, tells of two drunks in a stage box at Hammerstein's watching a trained chimp.

While the animal was still going through its rigamarole of bicycle riding, eating with a knife, fork and so on, the drunks dropped into a doze.

Three acts later, the misshapen Marshall P. Wilder was doing his famous monologue and one of the stews suddenly awakened, blinks. "Great Scott!" he exclaimed. "Wake up, Bill! They have got him talkin' now!"

Column Review, a monthly, has made his bow. It skims what the editors think is the cream from the daily columns from coast to coast and invites its readers to critize various efforts and pays $1 for each mistake detected therein.

It has the excellent taste to include extracts from the sports columns, which have become the pacemakers in originality of expression, thought and fine writing.

Don Marquis is the most economically independent columnist of the period. He writes only when he pleases. If he has an idea, he sails in and has a fine time. But he cannot be coaxed, although constantly besieged for essays.

Montague Glass was another writer who got hilarious kicks out of his job. Often he would leave his typewriter when turning out the Potash and Perlmutter extravaganzas to whoop and holler over the ridiculous quarrels in which he had involved them.

The most striking resemblance in the stage world is between George M. Cohan and the elder Pat Rooney. They are almost the same build, weight, and their heads and profiles are amazingly alike. Also they indulge the same bent-over swaggering walk.

Both are Irish and sons of beloved troupers of the same era. Each, too, began as a hoofer in vaudeville and is known for loyalty to the stage and personal friends. Their birthdays are not far apart, they are pals and have laid by comfortable fortunes.

Jack Benny continues the best box office attraction in personal appearances at movie houses. In one engagement where he was paid $7500 a week with percentage his total slice was $11,000. His radio popularity, plus an always good act, are responsible.

More than any other performer he has acquired the technique of turning the joke on himself, a formula applicable to many a badgered soul who has been taking life seriously the past few years.

Ernest Hemingway, with a wandering foot for bull fights, African lion hunts and deep sea fishing, hasn't cornered the entire nomadic strain in his Oak Hill, Ill. family.

His mother of 62 motors alone about the country painting pictures in the deep woods or on the desert when the mood strikes her.

A brother, Leicester, 19, is sailing to South America in a 17-footer. He confesses never reading a line of his brother's. The mother likes best "A Farewell to Arms."

Dudley Malone, a Bermuda house guest of Courtney Burr, was given a welcome party, a frolicsome affair that almost edged into dawn.

After two hours' sleep Malone was aroused for a round of golf. Preceding him was a brown-skinned caddie in a brown suit and cap. "There," said Malone wryly, "goes my taste walking!"

Text For Today "When he was a great way off, his father saw him and had compassion, ran, fell on his neck and kissed him."—St. Luke 15:20.

Stalls for Pedlars

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The Sidewalks of New York won't lend themselves to sentimental or wistful retrospect much longer. We can't be both efficient and picturesque. The old cabbies, the hurdy-gurdies and the little German bands are almost gone, and now the push-carts, last bizarre hold-out against urban regimentation, are on the way out.

Edwin C. Hill

William Fellowes Morgan, Jr., New York commissioner of markets, plans to herd the pedlars into nice, sanitary stalls. June 1st he will open the first of his four-block city markets at Park avenue and 111th street.

The 467 pedlars of the neighborhood must cease their nomadic ways, scrap their carts and be filed away by an efficient municipality in their tidy little cubicles—or else find other occupations.

Rigidity, uniformity, standardization is the price we pay for whatever cleanliness and order we get in a big city.

Not only in state and national government do we find new check-reins and martingales on the individual for the protection of the mass.

More and more, in our crowded living, metes and bounds for our movements, controls for our behavior, are being established.

Knowledge not only brings enlightenment, but brings new fears and taboos.

Before we knew much of anything about germs, Bleecker street, Second avenue and Al Smith's South street, down near the bridge, could swarm happily with bedizened—and, doubtless, unsanitary—push-carts, and many a sidewalk career could blossom into affluence or political power. But those days are gone.

One treasures the memories of that lusty and raucous free-for-all. There is romance and sentiment in the picture which it seems to me our children won't find in the backward look.

Public health supervision has, properly and irrevocably, placed safeguards over the storage and sale of food. Merchants, who carry payrolls, and pay taxes, get their day in court as they should.

Listen, World!

ACCEPT NO MAN'S PITY

Do not permit yourself to accept pity—either from yourself or from any other man.

Elsie Robinson

PITY IS THE MOST DANGEROUS FORM OF EMOTIONAL CHARITY.

It may seem to comfort you at first, but beware of such comfort, for it will turn you into a spiritual bum, a whining weakling, ever on the watch for hand-outs.

If you MUST kill yourself shamefully, take to drink, or dope, or wild women. But don't take to pity.

Drink and dope and wild women will destroy your body, but they will leave some remnant of pride and hope in you—some savor of honor to your name.

SOMETHING REMAINS

BUT PITY WILL GET YOU ENTIRELY.

It does not matter what fate has done to you—

You may be crippled in body—broken financially cheated and despoiled by life—robbed by death of the thing that was dearest to you—

Still within you there will remain something that is unbeaten, something that may inspire respect and command service—

AND STILL YOU MAY COME BACK IF YOU DON'T ACCEPT PITY.

Remember William Ernest Henley's cry—"INVICTUS"—

"Out of the night that covers me,
"Black as the pit from pole to pole,
"I thank whatever gods may be,
"For my unconquerable soul.
"In the fell clutches of circumstances
"I have not winced or cried aloud.
"Under the bludgeoning of chance
"My head is bloody but unbowed.
"Beyond this place of wrath and tears
"Looms but the horror of the shade,
"And yet the menace of the years
"Finds and shall find me unafraid.
"It matters not how straight the gate,
"How charged with punishment the scroll,
"I am the master of my fate
"I am the captain of my soul."

NOBLE WORDS

Those are noble words. Make them YOUR words.

Stand up straight in your rags!

Stand unquivering in your wounds.

God alone knows what's around the corner.

God alone knows if there's ANYTHING around the corner.

But this moment is yours! AND YOUR SOUL IS YOURS, WHATEVER FATE MAY HAVE DONE TO YOUR BODY OR YOUR PURSE.

HOLD FAST TO THAT PROUD TREASURE. DO NOT TRADE IT FOR ANY MAN'S PITY.

Stars and Stripes

Way Uncle Sam is jailing our counterfeiters and swindlers it will soon be so a man can't make a dishonest living any more.

And, speaking of war, the world may have only one more river of blood to cross.

Paradoxically speaking, the Lord Mayor of Dublin has had a "Cork-ing" good time in America.

The American government is spending about $7000 a minute. That's enough to make us a nation of clock-watchers.
